Principles of Effective Media Utilization

We are continually learning from multiple sources of media that provide us with information and challenge our thinking. As users of these sources, we need Media Literacy skills to know how to access them, how to understand and analyse the content, and how to create new media messages. (Stanbury 2009)

Text, television, video, and a host of the other media sources that will be covered in the textbook that we are using are valid and vital sources of information.

Your role is to guide your students to use these media as sources for their learning in ways that are wise, safe, and productive.
