

Medical Problems: Fact or Fiction?

(10 Reading Comprehension)

We often have different ideas about health, especially from friends or online. For example, how many times have you looked up your symptoms on the Internet? And, more importantly, how many times has the information been true? Sometimes these ideas are actually myths - things that aren't true. Knowing the difference between health myths and facts is very important for our well-being. Take this short quiz to see how much you know about health!

1. If you hurt your ankle, the best thing you can do to recover is walk until the pain goes away.
2. When you have a cold, you should avoid eating until you feel better.
3. To reach daily activities and moderate exercise, water is the best drink for staying hydrated.
4. You don't always need to clean a cut before putting a plaster on it, especially if it's small.
5. A dry, itchy throat (SFC) or hoarseness is a fever lasting more than three days means you should call a doctor.

This is a big mistake! If you hurt your ankle and it hurts when you put some weight on it, it's probably a sprained ankle. In this case, walking will just make the situation worse. The best thing to do - apart from going to the doctor - is to apply R.I.C.E. (Rest, Ice, Compression and Elevation) to reduce swelling and pain.
