Prospective Memory Theory And Applications:

Prospective Memory Maria A. Brandimonte, Gilles O. Einstein, Mark A. McDaniel, 2014-02-25 Devoted exclusively to prospective memory this volume organizes the research and thoughts of the important contributors to the field in one comprehensive resource The chapter authors not only focus on their own work but also review other research areas and address those where the methods and theories from the retrospective memory literature are useful and where they fall short Each section is followed by at least one commentary written by a prominent scholar in the field of memory The commentators present critical analyses of the chapters note ideas that they found particularly exciting and use these ideas as a foundation on which to elaborate their own views of prospective memory This volume will stimulate the thinking of active prospective memory researchers provide a coherent organization of the area for the increasing number of people who are interested in prospective memory but who are not yet actively conducting research in the area and serve as a book of readings for upper division seminars

Prospective Memory Matthias Kliegel, 2003 The six research papers in this special issue are paradigmatic examples of current approaches in this new and relevant field of cognitive psychology

Lifespan Development of Human Memory Peter Graf (PhD.), Nobuo Ohta, 2002 An original approach to memory development that views memory as a continuous process of growth and loss over the human lifespan rather than as a series of separate periods Until recently the vast majority of memory research used only university students and other young adults as subjects Although such research successfully introduced new methodologies and theoretical concepts it created a bias in our understanding of the lifespan development of memory This book signals a departure from young adult centered research It views the lifespan development of memory as a continuous process of growth and loss where each phase of development raises unique questions favoring distinct research methods and theoretical approaches Drawing on a broad range of investigative strategies the book lays the foundation for a comprehensive understanding of the lifespan development of human memory Topics include the childhood and adulthood development of working memory episodic and autobiographical memory and prospective memory as well as the breakdown of memory functions in Alzheimer's disease Of particular interest is the rich diversity of approaches methods and theories The book takes an interdisciplinary perspective drawing on work from psychology psychiatry gerontology and biochemistry

The Psychology of Learning and Motivation, 2007-10-03 The view of memory use as skilled performance embraces the interactive nature of memory and higher order cognition In considering the contexts in which memory is used this book helps to answer such questions as If asked where I live how do I decide on a street address or city name What influences my selection in a criminal lineup besides actual memory of the perpetrator Why do expert golfers better remember courses they've played than amateur golfers Chapters in this volume discuss strategies people use in responding to memory queries whether and how to access memory and how to translate retrieved products into responses Coverage includes memory for ongoing events and memory for prospective events how we remember to do future intended actions Individual differences in memory skill is explored across people and situations with special consideration given to the elderly population and how strategies at encoding and retrieval can offset what would otherwise be declining memory An integrative view of memory metamemory judgment and decision making and individual differences Relevant to both applied concerns and basic research Articles written by expert contributors Memory in the Real World , Prospective Memory in HIV-1 Infection Catherine Louise Carey,2005 Approximately 30 50% of individuals infected with HIV 1 exhibit neuropsychological NP impairment which is associated with neuropathology preferentially affecting the fronto striato thalamo cortical circuits Specifically a frontal subcortical pattern of encoding and retrieval deficits is evident on tests of retrospective episodic memory i e recalling past information Importantly such deficits have been linked to problems performing instrumental activities of daily living IADLs in particular medication adherence One episodic memory construct ubiquitous in everyday life but not yet examined in HIV 1 is prospective memory ProM which involves the complex processes of forming monitoring and executing future intentions vis vis ongoing distractions The current study examined ProM in 42 HIV 1 infected participants HIV and 29 demographically comparable healthy controls HC Results showed that the HIV group demonstrated poorer ProM functioning than HC Cohen s d 0 92 The HIV group exhibited deficits in both time and event based ProM committed more 24 hour delay ProM failures and were more likely to make ProM task substitution errors than HC No group differences were observed on the recognition trial indicating HIV individuals accurately retained and recognized ProM intentions when provided a structured format that minimized retrieval demands Within the HIV sample IADL dependent individuals demonstrated poorer ProM than IADL independent participants Cohen s d 1 25 but comparable retrospective memory Cohen s d range 0 17 to 0 37 Finally significant correlations between ProM and measures of executive functioning learning verbal working memory and information processing speed were found within HIV and HC samples Spearman s rho s ranged from 0 32 to 0 58 providing preliminary evidence for convergent validity The divergent validity of ProM was demonstrated by non significant correlations with semantic memory memory savings scores i e retention and recognition discrimination Taken together these data indicate that HIV 1 infection is associated with ProM impairment that is characterized by a breakdown in the strategic i e executive aspects of prospective encoding and retrieval In sum these findings support the construct validity of ProM the assessment of which may inform evaluations of and interventions related to HIV associated neurocognitive disorders Topics in Cognitive Psychology Serge P. Shohov,2003 Cognitive psychology is concerned with several mental processes including those involved in perception attention learning memory problem solving decision making and the use of language Therefore it is very extensive and of great relevance to other areas of psychology This new series presents research on the leading edge of cognitive psychology Contents Preface The Structure and Measurements of Self Concept for University Students The Dynamics of Classroom and Cognitive Activity of Students Confirmatory Factor Analysis of the Wechsler Adult Intelligence Scale III WAIS III 1 2 and 4
