Saving Languages:

Saving Languages Lenore A. Grenoble, Lindsay J. Whaley, 2005-11-03 Language endangerment has been the focus of much attention and as a result a wide range of people are working to revitalize and maintain local languages This book serves as a general reference guide to language revitalization written not only for linguists and anthropologists but also for language activists and community members who believe they should ensure the future use of their languages despite their predicted loss Drawing extensively on case studies it sets out the necessary background and highlights central issues such as literacy policy decisions and allocation of resources Its primary goal is to provide the essential tools for a successful language revitalization program such as setting and achieving realistic goals and anticipating and resolving common obstacles Clearly written and informative Saving Languages will be an invaluable resource for all those interested in the fate of small language communities around the globe

Language Documentation Lenore A. Grenoble, 2010 Language documentation also often called documentary linguistics is a relatively new subfield in linguistics which has emerged in part as a response to the pressing need for collecting describing and archiving material on the increasing number of endangered languages The present book details the most recent developments in this rapidly developing field with papers written by linguists primarily based in academic institutions in North America although many conduct their fieldwork elsewhere The articles in this volume position papers and case studies focus on some of the most critical issues in the field These include 1 the nature of contributions to linguistic theory and method provided by documentary linguistics including the content appropriate for documentation 2 the impact and demands of technology in documentation 3 matters of practice in collaborations among linguists and communities and in the necessary training of students and community members to conduct documentation activities and 4 the ethical issues involved in documentary linguistics

Language in the 21st Century Humphrey Tonkin, Timothy G. Reagan, 2003-01-01 What is the future of languages in an increasingly globalized world Are we moving toward the use of a single language for global communication or are there ways of managing language diversity at the international level Can we or should we maintain a balance between the global need to communicate and the maintenance of local and regional identities and cultures What is the role of education of language rights of language equality in this volatile global linguistic mix A group of leading scholars in sociolinguistics and language policy examines trends in language use across the world to find answers to these questions and to make predictions about likely outcomes Highlighted in the discussion are among other issues the rapidly changing role of English the equally rapid decline and death of small languages the future of the major European languages the international use of constructed languages like Esperanto and not least the question of what role applied scholarship can and should play in mapping and influencing the future
