Signature™, QSX, and ISX CM570/CM870/CM871/CM2250 Replacement Cylinder Liner Compatibility

Issue

In January of 2010, a new cylinder block and cylinder liner were introduced for production and service for all 15 liter engines. The new cylinder block was designed to be backward compatible with previous 15 liter engines for service repairs. The cylinder liner design is not cross-compatible between cylinder block designs. There is the potential that QuickServe™ Online will list incorrect cylinder block and cylinder liner part numbers for these engines.

Implementation of the new cylinder block was performed in phases at the Jamestown Engine Plant (JEP). Because of the implementation schedule, the new engine could be built with either a small bore diameter cylinder block and cylinder liner, or a large bore diameter cylinder block and cylinder liner.

Any Signature™, QSX, and ISX CM570/CM870/CM871/CM2250 engines that have had a cylinder block kit, ReCon® short-block, ReCon® long-block, or ReCon® engine replaced after January 1st, 2010, could potentially have been built with either a small bore diameter cylinder block and cylinder liner, or a large bore diameter cylinder block and cylinder liner.

Verification

Before replacing a flat top designed cylinder liner, verify the size of the cylinder liner presently installed on the engine. The correct cylinder liner can be determined by measuring the outside diameter of the cylinder liner at the cylinder liner o-ring packing area. For a groove top design cylinder liner, the verification is not needed when replacing a groove top cylinder liner with another groove top cylinder liner. See Figure 1 for the location where the measurement is to be taken.
