Real Connection:

Possibility and Actuality Nicolai Hartmann, 2013-03-22 Nicolai Hartmann's Possibility and Actuality is the second volume of a four part investigation of ontology. It deals with such questions as: How do we know that something is really possible? Is the possible only the actual? Is the actual only the possible? What is the difference between ideal and real possibility? This groundbreaking work of modal analysis describes the logical relations between possibility, actuality, and necessity, and it provides insight into the relations between modes of knowledge and modes of being. Hartmann reviews the history of philosophical concepts of possibility and necessity from ancient Megarian philosophy to Aristotle to Medieval Scholasticism to Leibniz, Kant, and Hegel. He explains the importance of modal analysis as a basic investigative tool and he proposes an approach to understanding the nature of human existence that unifies the fields of ontology, modal logic, metaphysics, and epistemology. This brilliant and fascinating work is relevant to many topics of debate in contemporary philosophy, including the ontology of possible worlds, the metaphysics of modality, the logic of counterfactual conditionals, and modal epistemology. It illuminates the nature of real, ideal, logical, and epistemic possibility.

Claims for Contribution and Reimbursement in an International Context Koji Takahashi, 2000. This book systematically examines claims for contribution and reimbursement in an international context. As such claims are often made in third party proceedings, particularly detailed analyses are given to the conflict of laws dimensions of third party procedure. The issues considered include: Which courts have jurisdiction over a contribution claim? What choice of law rules apply where contribution is sought under the English Civil Liability (Contribution) Act 1978 or by way of subrogation? What procedural requirements and jurisdictional requirements have to be satisfied to bring a contribution claim in third party proceedings? Can a contribution claim be brought in third party proceedings if there is an arbitration agreement or a foreign jurisdiction agreement between the defendant and the third party? Is it possible to obtain an antisuit injunction to restrain foreign proceedings corresponding to the domestic proceedings which form part of third party procedure? Where the party to two adjacent contracts in a chain transaction has an expectation that his liability under one contract will be covered back to back by his right of reimbursement under the other contract, to what extent is it possible to argue that the reimbursement claim is governed by the same law as the governing law of the original claim, so as to ensure the correspondence of liability and the right of reimbursement? In addressing these issues, the lawyers must be able to unravel the complexity of the situation from which the claim for contribution or reimbursement arises, the complexity created by the involvement of at least three parties: the original claimant, the contribution claimant, and the respondent to the contribution claim, and exacerbated by the international elements which may embrace multiple jurisdictions and legal systems. This book provides a valuable guide to this complex area for practitioners advising clients who wish to bring or are being threatened with a claim for contribution or reimbursement in an international context. Its scholarly approach will also stimulate academic interest.
