Reading Passage

Directions: Read the passage and answer the questions that follow.

Mendel's pea plants were used to study the inheritance of traits. He discovered that traits are passed from parents to offspring. He used mathematical methods to analyze the results of his experiments. He discovered that the inheritance of traits follows predictable patterns.

The patterns of inheritance can be used to predict the traits of offspring. This is done by using a Punnett square. A Punnett square is a diagram that is used to predict the probability of offspring having a certain trait.

Some traits are dominant and some are recessive. A dominant trait is one that is expressed in the offspring, while a recessive trait is one that is not expressed. A Punnett square can be used to predict the probability of offspring having a certain trait.

Mendel's pea plants were used to study the inheritance of traits. He discovered that traits are passed from parents to offspring. He used mathematical methods to analyze the results of his experiments. He discovered that the inheritance of traits follows predictable patterns.
