

The SAT Basics

- The SAT is offered seven times a year – beginning in Aug. and ending in June.
- There are NO penalties on how many times you retake the test. Plan on taking it at least THREE TIMES.
- Consider the SAT an open-book test. By taking multiple practice tests, you will develop a proper understanding of the questions the test makers like to ask repeatedly.
- This test is typically 2-3 times longer than a traditional classroom test; therefore, you must take full-length practice tests regularly to train your brain to be fully engaged for the entire test.
- This is a time management and critical-thinking-based test – you must train your brain to be pliable and work efficiently. Don't think of the SAT like every other test you would take in school. You combine what you have learned in school and apply that knowledge differently on this test.
- The SAT is a digital test taken on a computer. You will be able to do the following on the digital SAT:
 - Flag questions to come back to them later
 - An optional countdown clock - you can choose to show or hide the clock at the top of the testing screen. You can also be alerted when time is running out.
 - Built-in graphing calculator (Desmos) or you can bring your own
 - There is a reference sheet for each math question, consisting of common formulas
