Reshaping Accountancy in 2024

#1: Efficiency

Increased automation will reduce manual hours spent on repetitive tasks, increasing accuracy, and encouraging firms to be more thoughtful and precise about putting the right processes in place to start with.

#2: Upskilling Accountants

Integrating with new technology is not enough. Upskilling is valuable for both individual professionals and for their firm, bringing a needed perspective and abilities.

#3: Expansion of Accountancy

The combination of greater efficiency and wider skills will in turn expand the parameters of accountancy, making it possible to spend more time on client experience and on providing tailored strategic advice, suggestions and solutions.

#4: A Focus on Value Brings Balance

Automation and efficiency frees accountants from the traditional focus on billable hours. A fresh emphasis on advice and strategy, the focus shifts from hours to value, transforming what is possible for work/life balance.

#5: Capacity Crunch Will Start to Ease

Automation and efficiency reduces the pressure on accounting professionals by reducing the load they currently bear. Increasing automation makes it easier to streamline to employ contract workers for some aspects of the work, further reducing the capacity crunch that has presented such a challenge for the profession in recent years.

#6: Cybersecurity Front and Center

Approaching the cybersecurity challenge in a holistic manner, leveraging the efficiencies of automation, makes this more effective and minimize disruption for employees and clients.

#7: M&A Will Continue Apace

The impact of efficiency on revenue ensures that accountancy remains an attractive target for investment. At the same time, increased efficiency and automation within firms makes successful M&A processes simpler and more straightforward.

Head into 2024 Tech First.

Accounting firms and professionals who understand and leverage these trends will have a significant advantage heading into 2024. The positive potential for daily routine, firm efficiency and revenue, and a natural shift towards a future-focused outlook, is huge - and just waiting to be unleashed.

Fire Management in the American West Mark Hudson, 2011-10-01 Most journalists and academics attribute the rise of wildfires in the western United States to the USDA Forest Service s successful fire elimination policies of the twentieth century However in Fire Management in the American West Mark Hudson argues that although a century of suppression did indeed increase the hazard of wildfire the responsibility does not lie with the USFS alone The roots are found in the Forest Service s relationships with other more powerful elements of society the timber industry in particular Drawing on correspondence both between and within the Forest Service and the major timber industry associations newspaper articles articles from industry outlets and policy documents from the late 1800s through the present Hudson shows how the US forest industry under the constraint of profitability pushed the USFS away from private industry regulation and toward fire exclusion eventually changing national forest policy into little more than fire policy More recently the USFS has attempted to move beyond the policy of complete fire suppression Interviews with public land managers in the Pacific Northwest shed light on the sources of the agency s struggles as it attempts to change the way we understand and relate to
