Klaus Dinger and Michael Rother are well known members of Kraftwerk who broke away from the very successful German group in August 1971. On two occasions (Frankfurt, Wiesbaden) also lots of Kraftwerk joined the group!

They chose the name NEW (new) deliberately to attract attention as with any name of delugent or completely new, although of course they would admit themselves that there is nothing completely "new" in music.

Klaus and Michael borrowed money from several people in order to finance this first record themselves, and altogether it took four nights in Hamburg's wilderness studio to complete, with the help of Conrad Plank who also engineered the two Kraftwerk albums lacking and concerning. The album turned out to be a critical and financial success in Germany and made them one of the top three bands alongside Amen Duet II and The Con.

On this first album NEW decided to do still in a multi-instrumental format using voices only as an extra instrument.

As for the future the group says "we make no promotional firing of style, as we are very dependent on traditions and circumstances" so we must just wait and see.

By the way, you can write to the group at -
