

BASIC PRINCIPLES OF WORSHIP.

As an introduction, we will briefly review the etymology of the word worship both in the old as in the new testament.

Worship in the Old Testament. shajah (Hebrew) means to worship, to crouch down, to bow down, to lean. This word is found in modern Hebrew with the meaning of 'to lean' "to crouch". This term appears more than 170 times in the Old Testament. Shajah is the term used to approach God in worship. (1 Samuel 15:25; Jeremiah 7:2)

Worship in the New Testament. In the New Testament, the meaning of worship becomes much broader, it not only includes a posture of the body but also emphasizes above all in an attitude that links will and heart. In the New Testament, the words used for worship are:

- Proskuneo - To bow down, to give obedience to, (from pros, towards, and kuneo, to kiss. Like a dog licks its master's hand) John 4:24.
- Sebomai - To revere, with a strong feeling of reverential fear. Matthew 15:9.
- Latreuo - To serve, to render religious service, homage. Philippians 3:3.
- Eusebeo - To act piously towards [Someone]. Acts 17:23.

We could then conceptualize that to worship is:

- The expression of love, reverence, and heartfelt praise of the believer to God with an attitude of recognition of his supremacy and lordship.
- The ideal normal attitude of a rational creature in good relationship with the Creator.

But worshipping our Creator is far from being a simple concept, that is why we continue to outline some basic principles that we are teaching and practicing in the Ministry of Praise and Worship of our congregation.

WORSHIP IS RELATIONSHIP. - We must start by saying that Worship is Relationship, if we say that we adore God, that necessarily means that we have an intimate relationship with Him. God he has always wanted to have a relationship with a man. In Eden, the man conversed directly with God, after the sin of Adam and Eve, the way to approach God was to through the law, fulfilling the commandments and performing purification rituals like the sacrifices.

Let's read Hebrews 10:19-22.

- Emphasizes that worship comes from the heart.
- We have to do it with FAITH.
- We have to do it in Holiness.
- When we talk about freedom, it does not refer to the freedom to sing louder or to jump or Dancing refers to the freedom of having a direct relationship with the Father.

directed toward the worship leader by exploring the principles of worship taken from the Old and New Testaments in the Bible. The review will employ a qualitative explanatory study design to answer the question: what in addition to gifts and talents make for a qualified worship leader? Additionally, the sub-questions framed for this study are as follows: What are the correct intentions for the music ministry? Have the changes in musical styles and other significant church worship changes over the years altered the way we worship? Answering these questions will require exploring the Biblical purpose of music, knowing the importance of planning and developing effective relationships. It will also involve examining the issue of attire and knowing when to stop the music. This study is significant as it will highlight how worship should be conducted to align with God's Word, including the integrity of the heart of the worship leader at a time when the church is witnessing dramatic changes due to technology and globalization. Besides this, the review can be used as a reference point for Bible colleges and churches as there is an urgent need to equip worship leaders with the necessary Biblical principles that will help them effectively lead their congregants into God's presence.

Worship According to the Word Michael C. Griggs, 2019-03-09. Everyone worships something. While Christians can correctly answer "Who should be worshiped," they don't always know how to worship. A question that every Christian should be asking is: "How do you know how to worship?" This book looks at a principle that many Protestants have used throughout the centuries for determining how to worship: the regulative principle. This principle deals with what we do in corporate worship and how we can know for sure what God wants us to do. This book looks at some of the history of the regulative principle in Europe and America. The passages in Scripture that support this principle. How this principle can change the way you view every area of life and more. Worshipping God is the most important thing we can do. We had better get it right. While this book will not answer all your questions, it gives you a framework for determining what to do in worship.
