Meeting Time:	M W F	9 am – 9:50 am	HC 107
Office Hours:	M 1:30 pm–3 pm, T 3 pm–5 pm, F noon–1 pm + Open door policy
Required Materials:	Hubbard and O'Brien, Microeconomics , 3 rd ed. A copy of the Course Notes
Prerequisites:	MA116 or higher, and 24 hours, or consent of instructor

Course Description:

The fundamentals of price theory. A study of the interaction of markets and decisions made by consumers and firms. Market structure, allocation of resources, and efficiency issues are addressed.

Course Objectives:

Upon completion of this course, students should be able to:

1. Use economic thinking to analyze choices in the presence of trade-offs.
2. Apply the supply-and-demand framework and its extensions to the analysis of markets.
3. Explain the motivations and impact of government involvement in the marketplace.
4. Model the behavior of a profit maximizing firm in different market structures.
5. Perform quantitative analysis and demonstrate scientific reasoning in the context of economic models.

Relevance For General Education And Business:

As a course on how the economy works and on economic thinking, the Principles of Microeconomics course provides a foundation for informed citizenship and for informed practice of a variety of professions. For business professionals, the study of economics provides an understanding of how markets work and of the economic and regulatory environment of business. For business majors, the study of economic models and theory provides the conceptual and technical foundation for course work in finance, marketing, and accounting, as well as in economics.

Within the language of the Washburn University General Education Statement, this course falls into the social sciences general education group. It provides students with opportunities to acquire and further develop their quantitative reasoning and scientific literacy skills.

The aforementioned skill is crucial for the overall success in the course. It will be developed and improved through lectures, classroom discussion, examples and exercises used in class, practice problems, homework assignments, and the feedback provided by the instructor. The attainment of subject knowledge and general education skills will be assessed primarily by questions on the comprehensive final examination.

Expected Workload:

This course is worth three credit hours. For every credit hour awarded for a course, the student is typically expected to complete approximately one hour of classroom instruction, online interaction with course material, or direct faculty instruction and a minimum of two additional hours of student work each week for approximately 15 weeks for one semester or the equivalent amount of work over a different amount of time.
