Handbook of Reading Research P. David Pearson, Rebecca Barr, Michael L. Kamil,1984

The Handbook of Reading Research is the research handbook for the field. Each volume has come to define the field for the period of time it covers. When taken as a set, the four volumes provide a definitive history of reading research. Back of cover volume 4: When They Read What We Write Caroline Brettell, 1993-05-18. Stimulated by discussions of responsibility and ethics in anthropological fieldwork, this book explores what happens when people who are the subjects of research read what has been written about them. Reading Research Quarterly, 1977. Advances in Reading-Language Research Barbara A. Hutson, Steven B. Silvern, Thomas G. Sticht, 1983. Journal of Reading, 1977. Writing and Reading Ethnography Paul Atkinson, 2020. Ethnographic research is defined as much by its textual conventions as by its methods of data collection and analysis. Ethnographers reconstruct social worlds through their writing and writing styles have varied between disciplines, generations of researchers, and theoretical orientations. There are important and long-standing parallels between ethnographic and literary writing. In recent years, ethnographers have become increasingly self-aware about their own and others' writing and have explored the possibilities of different genres. Authors have therefore experimented with different alternative modes of writing. Awareness of textual conventions among anthropologists, in particular, has given rise to the crisis of representation. This has led to radical evaluations of how ethnographic representations are constructed. Textual awareness has also led to critical reflection on how ethnographic research is read. Students as Researchers of Culture and Language in Their Own Communities Ann Egan-Robertson, David Bloome, 1998. This text presents directions in classroom education generated by using ethnography and sociolinguistics as teaching tools, the theory behind these efforts, and the classroom practices involved. Chapters provide an introduction to ethnographic and sociolinguistic research, highlight the integration of students as researchers of culture and language in their own communities with concerns for academic learning, describe projects in which students studied language as sociolinguists, and describe how students' research on issues of culture and language was either a part of or led to their taking social action. Journal of Research and Development in Education, 1985. Yearbook of the American Reading Forum American Reading Forum. Annual Conference, 1989.
