F. Abdy Williams,2014-01 An excerpt from the INTRODUCTORY SKETCH THE representation of musical sounds in writing called musical notation or simply notation from nota a mark or sign is a thing so commonplace so universal and apparently so simple that we are apt to overlook the fact that our staff with its variously shaped notes and all that goes to convey a composer s thoughts to the world are the outcome of centuries of experiments and gradual improvements Whether the Egyptians the Hebrews Chaldeans and other Semitic nations which had arrived at a certain degree of musical culture noted their music is not known it may be presumed that they did but up to the present nothing has been discovered of the nature of a musical semeiography It cannot be said that these nations were not yet sufficiently advanced to be able to invent a means of writing down the various sounds of voices and instruments the fact remains that as far as we know at present the Greeks were the only ancient European nation that did so and they made use of letters of the alphabet for this purpose as did the Hindus before them and the Western Europeans after them the Persians Other used numbers and a kind of staff of nine lines between which the numbers were placed while the Chinese used special signs for their pentatonic scale The history of our present notation begins with that of the Greeks who arranged their alphabet in groups of three letters to each tone thus showing the semitones and quarter tones The knowledge of this arrangement passed away until rediscovered in the nineteenth century by the labours of Bellermann Fortlage and others who have explained the notation tables given by Alypius Aristides Nicomachus Ptolemy Gaudentius and later writers The tables arranged according to tropes and modes show successions of letters apparently taken at haphazard to indicate the seven notes of the three kinds of scale the diatonic chromatic and enharmonic The Greeks also used a system of time signs two of which have survived to the present day in the long and short u signs placed over vowels in Latin grammars and they had means of representing accent so that their notation was as complete as the mediaeval tablatures of which we shall speak later or the modern tonic sol fa The first use of Latin letters for representing musical sounds is found in the writings of Boethius about A D 500 though it is a mistake to speak of the Boethian notation since he never used the letters to indicate musical melodies
