Native American Identity, Christianity, and Critical Contextualization Thomas Eric Bates, 2013 The idea of being both Native and Christian has been especially challenging among American Indians Indian people have endured five hundred years of colonial dominance and the results have left divisions between those who are traditionalists keeping to the old ways and those who are progressives embracing the new Since the mid 1990s there has been a resurgence among Indian evangelicals who wish to break down the identity crisis related to being Native and Christian Native Christians are encouraging other Natives to meet somewhere in the middle of traditionalism and progressivism Eric Bates addresses the question of Native American identity a question that has been problematic among both Native Americans and non Indians Blood quantum as an indicator of Indigenous identity has led to constructions of different levels of Indianness Pan Indianism has brought together Native peoples from a variety of tribal backgrounds and has formed a new sense of collective identity as Indians versus tribal affiliations Using situational analysis Bates examines contextualized ministry via a Native Christian conference which allows Christian Indians to express their Indianness by wearing Native regalia using Indigenous instruments and employing other forms of Native expression

Native Christians Aparecida Vilaça, Professor Robin M Wright, 2013-05-28 Native Christians reflects on the modes and effects of Christianity among indigenous peoples of the Americas drawing on comparative analysis of ethnographic and historical cases Christianity in this region has been part of the process of conquest and domination through the association usually made between civilizing and converting While Catholic missions have emphasized the civilizing process teaching the Indians the skills which they were expected to exercise within the context of a new societal model the Protestants have centered their work on promoting a deep internal change or conversion based on the recognition of God s existence Various ethnologists and scholars of indigenous societies have focused their interest on understanding the nature of the transformations produced by the adoption of Christianity The contributors in this volume take native thought as the starting point looking at the need to relativize these transformations Each author examines different ethnographic cases throughout the Americas both historical and contemporary enabling the reader to understand the indigenous points of view in the processes of adoption and transformation of new practices objects ideas and values
