Introducing the Human Genome

The Race for Life

For all the dreams of the twentieth century, the most profound and revolutionary achievement of the century was the sequencing of the human genome. In 2003, scientists announced the completion of the Human Genome Project, a massive international effort to identify all the genes that make up the human genome. This project was the culmination of decades of research in genetics and molecular biology. It was the first time that the complete set of human DNA instructions for building and running a human body was known.

Gene Definition

The human genome is the full complement of genes passed to a human cell. Genes are sections of DNA that contain instructions for building proteins. Proteins are the molecules that do most of the work in cells. They are the building blocks of life. The genome is the blueprint for life. It contains all the information needed to build and maintain a human being. The genome is the most complex and largest of all genomes. It contains about 3 billion base pairs of DNA.
