Center for International Studies. Italy Project,1962      After the Three Italies Michael Dunford,Lidia Greco,2008-09-15 After the Three Italies develops a new political economy approach to the analysis of comparative regional development and the territorial division of labour and exemplifies it through an up to date account of Italian industrial change and regional economic performance Responds to recent theoretical debates in economic geography involving economists geographers and planners Builds the foundations for a new theoretical approach to regional economic development and the territorial division of labour Draws on the results of a recent ESRC funded research project as well as on a large range of official data sets Provides an up to date picture of Italy s economic performance and of its recent development relative to other European countries and the rest of the world Analyses Italy s internal differentiation and its persistent regional inequalities Examines the regional impact of the recent evolution of the car chemicals steel and clothing industries Leads to a new and more complex picture of Italian development      Italy Elizabeth Conner Cox,1964      The uneven development of Italy's regions, 1861 - 1936 ,2014 This thesis sheds new light on the process of economic divergence that characterized Italy s regions in the second half of the nineteenth century and the Interwar period It shows that social capital had a limited impact on the regions economic fortune prior to the Great War Further only specific dimensions of social capital affected regional economic growth Instead the country s regional inequalities grew large as a result of different endowments of human capital In turn human capital differences inherited from pre unification states remained large as a result of public policy which established a decentralized education system in 1859 This choice delayed convergence in primary schooling across regions because of the tight connection between municipal fiscal capacity and the supply of schools and teachers Centralized education introduced with the Daneo Credaro Reform in 1911 loosened this link and favoured regional convergence in human capital Contrary to expectations local institutional mechanisms did not play a large role in the growth of mass education a detailed analysis of the determinants of primary schooling across Italy s provinces in the years 1871 1911 confirms that local economic conditions influenced the development of human capital far more than political participation and access to local decision making These results cast doubt on recent interpretations of the socioeconomic divergence experienced by Italy s regions While further research is needed on the link between local institutions and the development of basic education this work calls for a renewed focus on the way that central policy affected regional divergence and Italy s overall economic development before the Second World War      The Development of Regional Economic Differentials in Italy Richard S. Eckaus,1960      OECD Regional Development Studies Regional Innovation in Piedmont, Italy From Innovation Environment to Innovation Ecosystem

OECD,2021-12-16 To make the most of its longstanding tradition of manufacturing and innovation Piedmont Italy is undertaking a process of industrial transition the success of which may be linked to an updated approach to its regional innovation policy This should include promoting technology and non technology driven innovation building the innovation competences of micro and small enterprises in addition to medium and large ones better connecting regional innovation actors and ensuring that innovation contributes to the region s broader development goals such as sustainable regional development

Antinomies of Economic Development in Italy Marco Santillo,2025-10-20 This essay addresses a topic of great historiographical interest that of territorial gaps between northern and southern Italy The study is conducted from a peculiar point of view that of the formation and role of the ruling classes in regional economic promotion The notion of mediating capitalism analyzes the role of a ruling class whose strength lies not only in entrepreneurial talents but also in the ability to establish relations with institutions local national and international In fact after World War II the ability of the ruling class to find institutional referents who were aware not only of the fragilities but also of the potential of this area was decisive in order to launch a season of civil and economic progress in Southern Italy The birth of Svimez first and of the Cassa per il Mezzogiorno later testify in good measure to the concrete results achieved by this ruling class

Understanding Regional Development Lorraine Frisina,2008 This book explores the efficacy of costly redistributive measures taken by the European Union in the form of structural funding within the context of Italian regional development It addresses divergent outcomes in socio economic growth observed between the Center North and Mezzogiorno regions in light of Structural Fund allocations assigned during the last two distribution periods years 1994 2000 and 2000 2006 In doing so the study establishes that performance outcomes fail to correspond with patterns in funding as the Mezzogiorno despite receiving up to three times the amount of structural funding than its Center Northern counterpart has yet to realize the same degree of growth whether in absolute terms or trends in performance thereby indicating the role of non financial factors in influencing development The author develops a novel model of regional absorption that wedds assumptions derived from absorption literature concerning the role of administrative capacity and rent seeking with the economic institutionalism of Douglass C North 1990 particularly his transaction cost theory of exchange The application of this model to two representative case studies Tuscany and Sardinia affirms the necessity in bolstering administrative capacity while curbing rent seeking within regional institutions as a means of lowering transaction costs and thereby increasing the productive absorption of Structural Funds The book bridges political and economic approaches to understanding the issue of regional development
