

Servant Rules

1. When spoken to, stand still, keep your hands quiet, and always look at the person speaking.
2. Never let your voice be heard by the ladies and gentlemen of the household. If they have spoken directly to you with a question or statement which requires a response, speak as little as possible.
3. In the presence of your mistress, never speak to another servant or person of your own rank, or to a child, unless for necessity, and then as little as possible and as quietly as possible.
4. Never begin to talk to the ladies or gentlemen, unless to deliver a message or to ask a necessary question, and then do it in few words as possible.
5. Items that have been dropped, such as spectacles or handkerchiefs, and other small items, should be returned to their owners on a salver.
6. Always use the proper address: "Sir", "Ma'am", "Miss", or "M'rs", as the case may be.
7. Never offer your opinion to your employer.
8. Always "give room"; that is, if you encounter one of your betters in the house or on the stairs, you are to make yourself as invisible as possible, turning yourself toward the wall and averting your eyes.
9. Except in reply to a salutation offered, never say "good morning" or "good night" to your employer.
10. If you are required to walk with a lady or gentleman in order to carry packages, or any other reason, always keep 3 paces back.
11. You shall not receive any relative, visitor or friend into the house, nor shall you introduce any person into the Servants' Hall, without the consent of the Butler or Housekeeper.
12. Followers are strictly forbidden. Any member of the female staff who is found to be fraternizing shall be immediately dismissed.
