Adedokun, Erebi Ndoni, 2023-08-28 This book focuses on reproductive health rights and assisted reproductive technologies ART in sub Saharan Africa Each chapter is connected to the other by focusing on different aspects of ART as a means of achieving conception Topics such as regulation of ART practices surrogacy and specific aspects of ART which are gradually becoming acceptable but largely unregulated in Africa promises to be of interest to scholars researchers and fertility practitioners Research in the book take a rights based approach and ethical analysis of ART practice in sub Saharan Africa by authors from diverse backgrounds bringing together law and society perspectives Readers stand to gain new knowledge on the societal legal medical and psychological requirements effects and challenges of reproductive health rights and ART in the African context The book is also relevant to UN Sustainable Development Goal 3 Good Health and Well being given that it promotes and advocates for access to reproductive healthcare for persons who have difficulty or are unable to conceive without medical assistance

Birth Rights and Wrongs Dov Fox, 2019 Introduction Basic civil rights Missing protections Litigation s limits Elusive injuries Courthouse claims Damage awards Procreation deprived Procreation imposed Procreation confounded Fraught remedies Conclusion Marshaling Technology for Development National Research Council/World Bank, Policy and Global Affairs, Office of International Affairs, Technology and Development Steering Committee, 1995-11-06 Recent technological advances particularly in microelectronics and telecommunications biotechnology and advanced materials pose critical challenges and opportunities for developing countries and for the development banks and other organizations that serve them Those countries that fail to adapt to the transformations driven by new technologies in industry agriculture health environment energy education and other sectors may find it difficult to avoid falling behind This book represents a joint effort by the World Bank and the National Research Council to survey the status and effect of technology change in key sectors and to recommend action by the development organizations government private sector and the scientific and technological community Reproductive Technologies and Reproductive Rights Pinhas Shifman, 2016 We observe a modern approach that allows for the possibility of a planned separation between sexual relations and procreation The widespread use of contraceptives created the possibility of sex without reproduction just as reproductive technologies created the possibility of reproduction without sex Consequentially the individual s ability to control and plan childbirth has expanded but parallel possibilities have been created for societal intervention in that process The question whether society may limit one s right to be a parent through the use of reproductive technologies has become a crucial legal issue Artificial techniques of procreation present a special problem On the one hand we are concerned with planning the birth of a child and not with establishing what is best for a child already born On the other hand it is not a matter that begins and ends in the bedroom Moreover persons requiring artificial techniques expect not merely non intervention but positive aid It is submitted that a distinction should be drawn between limiting a person's freedom to realize his right to parenthood as he sees fit and the denying societal aid. The limits of positive societal aid are established through the changes in the legal definition of parenthood that society is willing to accept in order to meet individual desires. Thus while we may question the existence of a justification for denying single woman's freedom to procreate or the freedom of a couple to seek the aid of a surrogate mother that does not mean that society must provide the legal framework that might have the effect of denying parenthood to other partners to the procreative process. Healing Technology Kathryn Strother Ratcliff, 1989 Provides a framework for understanding forces that produce and promote technologies that affect women's health. Human Reproduction, Emerging Technologies, and Conflicting Rights Robert Blank, Janna C. Merrick, 1995 Examines the policy conflicts that have arisen as a result of advancing technologies in the area of human reproduction discussing abortion sterilization assisted reproduction surrogate motherhood prenatal intervention fetal and embryo research and the care of critically ill newborns.

Assisted Reproductive Technologies in the Global South and North Virginie Rozée, Sayeed Unisa, 2016-07-15 Assisted Reproductive Technologies in the Global South and North critically analyses the political and social frameworks of Assisted Reproductive Technology ART and its impact in different countries In the context of a worldwide social pressure to conceive particularly for women this collection explores the effect of the development of ARTs growing globalisation and reproductive medicalization on global societies Providing an overview of the issues surrounding ART both in the Global South and North this book analyses ART inequalities commonalities and specificities in various countries regions and on the transnational scene From a multidisciplinary perspective and drawing on multisite studies it highlights some new issues relating to ART e g egg freezing surrogacy and discusses some older issues regarding infertility and its medical treatment e g in vitro fertilisation childless stigmatisation and access to treatment This book aims to redress the balance between what is known about Assisted Reproductive Technologies in the Global North and how the issue is investigated in the Global South It aims to draw out the global similarities in the challenges that ARTs bring between these different areas of the world It will appeal to scholars and students in the social sciences medicine public health health policy women s and gender studies and demography

Reproduction, Technology, and Rights James M. Humber, Robert F. Almeder, 1996-01-01 In Reproduction Technology and Rights philosophers and ethicists debate the central moral issues and problems raised by today s revolution in reproductive technology Leading issues discussed include the ethics of paternal obligations to children the place of in vitro fertilization in the allocation of health care resources and the ethical implications of such new technologies as blastomere separation and cloning Also considered are how parents and society should respond to knowledge gained from prenatal testing and whether or not the right to abort should relieve men of the duty to support unwanted children Reproduction Technology and Rights illuminates the moral and ethical choices that our society faces because of advances in reproductive technology and helps to make those decisions better informed

WHO guideline on self-care interventions for health and well-being World Health Organization, 2021-07-31 Self care interventions are among the most promising and exciting new approaches to improve health and well being both from a health systems perspective and for people who use these interventions The World Health Organization WHO uses the following working definition of self care Self care is the ability of individuals families and communities to promote health prevent disease maintain health and cope with illness and disability with or without the support of a health worker The scope of self care as described in this definition includes health promotion disease prevention and control self medication providing care to dependent persons seeking hospital specialist primary care if necessary and rehabilitation including palliative care It includes a range of self care modes and approaches While this is a broad definition that includes many activities it is important for health policy to recognize the importance of self care especially where it intersects with health systems and health professionals Worldwide an estimated shortage of 18 million health workers is anticipated by 2030 a record 130 million people are currently in need of humanitarian assistance and disease outbreaks are a constant global threat At least 400 million people worldwide lack access to the most essential health services and every year 100 million people are plunged into poverty because they have to pay for health care out of their own pockets There is an urgent need to find innovative strategies that go beyond the conventional health sector response While self care is not a new term or concept self care interventions have the potential to increase choice when they are accessible and affordable and they can also provide more opportunities for individuals to make informed decisions regarding their health and health care In humanitarian settings for example due to lack of or limited health infrastructure and medical services in the crisis affected areas self care could play an important role to improve health related outcomes Self care also builds upon existing movements such as task sharing which are powerful strategies to support health systems Issues in Reproductive and Genetic Engineering ,1990 WHO guideline on self-care
