Research readings for discipline-based art education Stephen Mark Dobbs,1988      Research Readings for Discipline-based Art Education Stephen M. Dobbs,1988      Learning in and Through Art Stephen M. Dobbs,1998 This Handbook provides a practical straightforward guide to the theory and practice of discipline based art education This comprehensive approach to art education has transformed the way students create and understand art it also offers opportunities for relating art to other subjects as well as to the personal interests and abilities of young learners This completely revised edition explains how DBAE draws content from the disciplines of art making art criticism art history and aesthetics and shows how the practice of DBAE in schools over the past several years has influenced how art is taught today

Color Expressions: an Art Educational Voyage Dr. Lonnie G. Ford,2009-08-28 Several years ago I enrolled in a graduate course on educational research that focused on closing the achievement gap for African American children The course was structured to explore issues causes and concerns for the achievement gap Studying different educational outcomes reading books and articles we regularly shared our insights about some leading causes Most importantly we were instructed to stay within our subject areas when finding any contributions to that gap In my attempt to complete the assignment of researching possible causes in my discipline of art education I found myself frustrated and angry Why There were no research studies exploring how art education was a part of the equation leading to solutions in closing the gap In addition there were no basic instructions or curricula designed to make connections to the art student to develop critical thinking skills or to incorporate the use of students life experiences for learning Furthermore I felt that art education was used as a testing ground in urban schools like the Chicago Public Schools using Teaching Artists to teach art with no teaching certification or teaching qualifications Booth 2003 The purpose of this approach was to use their knowledge and practices of art to influence change in students learning This kind of experiment branched away from any real effort to integrate art education and truly recognize it as a viable core subject area While conducting research for the course I found that researchers defined the achievement gap between white and African American students solely in terms of the four core subjects of math science social studies and language arts with no attention given to art education e g Berlak 2001 Honig 2001 Limn 2000 Sacks 2000 A study by the National Black Caucus entitled Closing the Achievement Gap Improving Education Outcomes for African American Children November 2001 reports Make improving the literacy skills of students a top priority Students who cannot read will experience little success in school Reading is the key to academic achievement in every subject ranging from math and English to science and history We must put reading first by finding initiatives and programs designed to strengthen the reading skills of students particularly low performing students Again there was no mention of art As both an African American and an art teacher I found it very disturbing that the recommendations of many national and local art educational organizations and schools failed to address the importance of teaching art education in

African American urban school settings My dissertation research ultimately arose from this concern

Bringing Art Teachers and Art Museums Together in a Comprehensive Approach to the Study of Art Lisa Topelmann,1990 A Humanistic Approach to Photography and Teaching Dale (Dee). Walter,1989 NCECA Journal ,1999 Youth Development Through a Community Art Program Christopher O. Adejumo,1997 Abstract There are several Community Art Programs in the United States These art programs often provide after school and weekend art activities for youngsters living within the neighborhoods where they are located This dissertation discusses how a Community Art Program influences the social and cultural development of the youth participants The art program studied is located in the Near East side of Columbus in an area known as Poindexter Village The ages of youth participants in the Community Art Program range from 5 years to 12 years About ninety five percent of these participants are African Americans The other five percent consist of children from other ethnic groups and nationalities such as Mexican Americans Nigerians and Ethiopians The first chapter addresses events leading to the research and an historical overview of the development of Community Art Programs in the United States It also entails the statement of research problem background of research problem purpose of research and definition of terms used The second chapter consists of review of available literature on the subject of Community Art Programs The literature is classified under two major categories which I describe as Investigative Reporting and Empirical Research The differences between these categories are described Chapter three discusses the method and strategies used in gathering information during my fieldwork The research method used is ethnographic case study and techniques employed in data collection are participant observation interviews and historical survey In chapter four analysis of collected data is discussed in a narrative format using the coding system Also in this chapter the research findings are summarized based on the social and cultural impact of the Community Art Program on youth participants Chapter five entails conclusions and implications of the research This chapter also discusses suggestions for follow up studies and application of research findings

The Future of the Arts David B. Pankratz, Valerie B. Morris, 1990 This volume presents the work of social scientists public policy analysts policy makers and arts funding decision makers The contributors seek to address serious issues confronting the future of the arts in America by defining the role of social science research in the formulation of public policies The chapters reflect the diverse disciplinary perspectives and methodologies which make up the broad enterprise of arts research and cover a wide array of current issues in arts research and public policy including the current state of arts and arts education research arts participation by ethnic cultures baby boomers and older adults emerging patterns of aesthetic choice public arts policy in the future and conditions for the growth and effective use of arts research Academics and students in political science policy analysis sociology economics arts administration and education policy makers and arts administrators will find The Future of the Arts a valuable resource The contributors conclude that the future of the arts in America will be shaped by a wide array of forces The challenge is in avoiding passive reactivity to these trends assessing their short term and long term influences and strategically developing policy options that are within the decision making control of leadership sectors in the complex arts policy world Until recently the political context of public arts policy has hindered the development and utilization of arts research In many ways this book illustrates the promise of research based policy formulation for the arts in America
