Representing And Acquiring Geographic Knowledge:

Representing and Acquiring Geographic Knowledge Ernest Simon Davis, YALE UNIV NEW HAVEN CT DEPT OF COMPUTER SCIENCE., 1984 This thesis presents a computational model of memory for spatial relations how knowledge of geography may be represented retrieved and acquired We focus particularly on the problems of representing incomplete and inexact information in a knowledge base and of learning a large scale area from a sequence of small scale views of the area Our model called MERCATOR includes an original representation scheme for two dimensional space routines that retrieve information from the knowledge base in useful form and a routine the assimilator that builds up a knowledge base incrementally from a sequence of scene descriptions All these have been implemented in a running computer program The representation approximates object boundaries in terms of sequences of straight edges and it records object positions in terms of the dimensions of edges Inexactness information is represented by recording bounds on edge dimensions and on the maximal distance from an edge to a boundary Incomplete information is represented by recording only part of the boundary and interior of an object This scheme is capable of representing many kinds of situations and of partial states of knowledge The assimilator consists of two parts The matcher finds correspondences between a scene description and the knowledge base The merger adds the new information from the scene description into the knowledge base The major result of this thesis is that a representation of space should integrate shape and positional information but should maintain an abstract level of geometric description separate from object descriptions

Representing and Acquiring Geographic Knowledge Ernest Davis, 1986 Representing and Acquiring Geographic Knowledge Ernest Davis, 1986 Foundations of Knowledge Acquisition Alan L. Meyrowitz, Susan Chipman, 1993-01-31 One of the most intriguing questions about the new computer technology that has appeared over the past few decades is whether we humans will ever be able to make computers learn As is painfully obvious to even the most casual computer user most current computers do not Yet if we could devise learning techniques that enable computers to routinely improve their performance through experience the impact would be enormous The result would be an explosion of new computer applications that would suddenly become economically feasible e g personalized computer assistants that automatically tune themselves to the needs of individual users and a dramatic improvement in the quality of current computer applications e g imagine an airline scheduling program that improves its scheduling method based on analyzing past delays And while the potential economic impact of successful learning methods is sufficient reason to invest in research into machine learning there is a second significant reason studying machine learning helps us understand our own human learning abilities and disabilities leading to the possibility of improved methods in education While many open questions remain about the methods by which machines and humans might learn significant progress has been made
