

Let's create a flowchart for the problem A (Solve the equation $2x^2 + x + 5$ for all x between 5 and 10).

The first task is to step back from the problem and plan how you would like to attack it. After you have devised this general plan of attack, you may proceed with the flowcharting and pseudocode.

Consider very carefully how you approach such a problem on a high-school mathematics exam. Your program should take x and start it at 5. Next, substitute 5 for each value of x in the equation ($2(5)^2 + (5) + 5$) and then solve (answer = 60). Now take the next x , which is obviously 6 ($5 + 1$). Solve the equation for $x = 6$ and continue on. The last value of x you will do this for is 10.

Now that we know how to approach the problem, let's sketch it out. We will discuss the flowchart and pseudocode in detail for this first example.

```
Set x to 5
While x <= 10
  Compute 2x2 + x + 5
  Store answer
  Print answer
  Increment x
Return to While Statement
Quit
```
