Program Evaluation In The Health Fields:

Program Evaluation in the Health Fields Herbert C. Schulberg, Alan Sheldon, Frank Baker, 1970 In assembling almost three dozen papers which bear upon the evaluation of health programs we have tried to select those materials which could meet the needs of both researchers and program directors It is believed that in spite of the well known differences in orientation and priorities which these two groups frequently exhibit nevertheless there exists a wide span of common concern which needs only to be properly plumbed To capitalize upon the mutual interests of researchers and practitioners and to demonstrate opportunities for fruitful collaboration we have emphasized papers of potential interest to both groups and avoided selections which were overly skewed toward the needs of only one of them Many other sources are available for the study of program development or research methodology but this volume one differs in its attempt to integrate what generally have been dichotomous fields of interest Volume II was a response to the escalating demands for accountability increasingly complex conceptual and methodological options and a proliferating literature require that sophisticated materials be readily available if assessments are to be performed in knowledgeable ways When is paired with our earlier volume those teaching the growing number of program evaluation courses in medical schools and schools of public health social work and business should have more than enough reading materials for their introductory and advanced seminars

Program Evaluation in the Health Fields Herbert C. Schulberg, 1977 The Practice of Health Program Evaluation David Grembowski, 2001-04-13 As more and more money is spent developing programs and services to solve health problems how can one know if a specific health program works or what it would take to improve it Aimed at addressing this issue The Practice of Health Program Evaluation provides readers with the methods to evaluate health programs and the expertise to navigate the political terrain so as to work more effectively with decision makers and other groups To convey these principles Grembowski uses the metaphor of evaluation being a three act play with a variety of actors and interest groups each having a role that involves entering and exiting the stage at different points in the evaluation process Federal Program

Trevisan, John C. Carey, 2020-02-28 Program Evaluation in School Counseling is the first book on program evaluation that looks to the field and literature of program evaluation and then relates methods procedures and practices back to the practice of school counseling Written by two accomplished authors who teamed up to build evaluation capacity among school and school based counselors internationally the book highlights their interdisciplinary work covering many years and several continents Based on the authors model for teaching program evaluation and their research on school counselor competence in program evaluation

this concise clear and practical guide supports the continuing professional development of school counselors through training workshops and self study This book addresses the program evaluation knowledge skills and understandings that school based counselors are expected to use in line with the CACREP 2016 Standards The book is intended as a companion text for university courses in research methods and or in the organization and administration of counseling services It is also appropriate as a self study guide to help practicing school counselors develop expertise in evaluation
