

The Merchant's Prologue and Tale

The Merchant in the General Prologue

"forked berd" - fashionable

"bootes clasped faire and fetisly" - neat and elegant fastening, the Merchant takes care to appear as if he has a high status

"worthy" - this is how the Merchant will soon describe Januarie, who is clearly not at all "worthy", casting doubts on the Merchant's own worthiness

"in dette" secretive and perhaps untrustworthy, his wealth and status is not as respectable as it seems, the narrator also does not know the Merchant's name

The Merchant's Prologue

The Merchant is responding to the Clerk's story about the perfect woman, Griselda

The Merchant says his wife has caused him "weping and wailing", she is a "shrewe"

- Compares his wife to a rodent, a common animalisation of women in literature
- Mean-spirited and inferior
- Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew"
- The Merchant says that even if his wife were married to the devil she would be able to overpower him
- The revelation that they have only been married for "these monthes two" invalidates the Merchant's knowledge and opinions on the subject, comes across as foolish
- The Host establishes that the aim of the Merchant's story will be to justify his unhappiness by blaming womankind's deceitful nature, and to lament the foolishly trusting nature of men

The Fabliau style was popularised in medieval France

Bertolet,2016-04-15 As residents of fourteenth century London Geoffrey Chaucer John Gower and Thomas Hoccleve each day encountered aspects of commerce such as buying selling and worrying about being cheated Many of Chaucer s Canterbury Tales address how pervasive the market had become in personal relationships Gower s writings include praises of the concept of trade and worries that widespread fraud has harmed it Hoccleve s poetry examines the difficulty of living in London on a slender salary while at the same time being subject to all the temptations a rich market can provide Each writer finds that principal tensions in London focused on commerce how it worked who controlled it how it was organized and who was excluded from it Reading literary texts through the lens of archival documents and the sociological theories of Pierre Bourdieu this book demonstrates how the practices of buying and selling in medieval London shaped the writings of Chaucer Gower and Hoccleve Craig Bertolet constructs a framework that reads specific Canterbury tales and pilgrims associated with trade alongside Gower's Mirour de L'Omme and Confessio Amantis and Hoccleve's Male Regle and Regiment of Princes Together these texts demonstrate how the inherent instability commerce produces also produces narratives about that commerce
