Metaphor And Material Culture:

Metaphor and Material Culture Christopher Tilley, 1999 This book provides an innovative contribution to debates about the use of metaphor in the social sciences written by one of today's foremost archaeological theorists Christopher Tilley combines theoretical interpretation with practical examples to show the significance of the concept of metaphor in the study and writing of material forms The first part of the book provides an overview of the use and value of the notion of metaphor in its broadest sense Tilley argues that without metaphor human communication would be almost impossible and he shows how metaphors provide the basis for an interpretative understanding of the world He then presents three archaeological and ethnographic studies of metaphors chosen to demonstrate the richness of the concept for understanding texts objects and artworks Part III of the book examines metaphor more specifically in relation to the social construction of landscape and the meaning of place in the prehistoric past and the present The author concludes by developing elements of a theory of material forms as solid metaphor The book will be of interest to all those examining metaphor in its various applications Theory and Practice in Archaeology Ian Hodder, 2004-08-02 An overview of the way the archaeological debate has developed over the last 10 years Hodder aims to break down the separation between theory and practice and reconcile the division between the intellectual and the dirt archaeologist Impressive Shakespeare Harry Newman, 2019-01-16 Impressive Shakespeare reassesses Shakespeare's relationship with print culture in light of his plays engagement with the language and material culture of three interrelated impressing technologies wax sealing coining and typographic printing It analyses the material and rhetorical forms through which drama was thought to imprint early modern audiences and readers with ideas morals and memories and looking to our own cultural moment shows how Shakespeare has been historically constructed as an impressive dramatist Through material readings of four plays Coriolanus A Midsummer Night's Dream Measure for Measure and The Winter's Tale Harry Newman argues that Shakespeare deploys the imprint as a self reflexive trope in order to advertise the value of his plays to audiences and readers and that in turn the language of impression has shaped and continues to shape Shakespeare's critical afterlife The book pushes the boundaries of what we understand by print culture and challenges assumptions about the emergence of concepts now central to Shakespeare's perceived canonical value such as penetrating characterisation poetic transformation and literary fatherhood Harry Newman's suggestive analysis of techniques and tropes of sealing coining and printing produces a revelatory account of Shakespearean creative poetics It's sustainedly startling in its rereading of familiar lines but the chapter I found most original is on Measure for Measure Newman is the first critic to attempt to interpret the play's authorial status as part of its own thematic and linguistic interrogation of illegitimacy and counterfeiting He makes authorship matter in a literary and creative rather than a quantitative and statistical sense Impressive Shakespeare is a brilliant scholarly debut Emma Smith Editor Shakespeare Survey Professor of Shakespeare Studies Hertford College Oxford How Things Shape the Mind Lambros

International Handbook of Historical Archaeology Teresita Majewski,David Gaimster,2009-06-07 In studying the past archaeologists have focused on the material remains of our ancestors Prehistorians generally have only artifacts to study and rely on the diverse material record for their understanding of past societies and their behavior. Those involved in studying historically documented cultures not only have extensive material remains but also contemporary texts, images, and a range of investigative technologies to enable them to build a broader and more reflexive picture of how past societies, communities, and individuals operated and behaved. Increasingly, historical archaeology refers not to a particular period, place, or a method but rather an approach that interrogates the tensions between artifacts and texts irrespective of context. In short, historical archaeology provides direct evidence for how humans have shaped the world we live in today. Historical archaeology is a branch of global archaeology that has grown in the last 40 years from its North American base into an increasingly global community of archaeologists, each studying their area of the world in a historical context. Where historical archaeology started as part of the study of the post-Columbian societies of the United States and Canada, it has now expanded to interface with the post-medieval archaeologies of Europe and the diverse post-imperial experiences of Africa, Latin America, and Australasia. The 36 essays in the International Handbook of Historical Archaeology have been specially commissioned from the leading researchers in their fields, creating a wide-ranging digest of the increasingly global field of historical archaeology. The volume is divided into two sections: the first reviewing the key themes, issues, and approaches of historical archaeology today, and the second containing a series of case studies charting the development and current state of historical archaeological practice around the world. This key reference work captures the energy and diversity of this global discipline today.

Raising the Eyebrow Lauren Golden, 2001. Twenty-eight essays in honour of John Onians by his colleagues and friends. The introduction outlines Onians' major contribution to art historical studies, and although the papers have no central theme, they are all provocative in their reassessments of traditional contexts and interpretations of art and culture.

Constructing Communities Bleda S. Düring, 2006. This study consists of a contextual analysis of a group of Central Anatolian Neolithic settlements that includes the sites of Akl Hyk Canhasan III, atalhyk Erbaba, and Canhasan I, and can be dated between 8500 and 5500 Calibrated BC. These settlements are characterised by a spatial organisation in which buildings are grouped in neighbourhood clusters and in which an estimated 30 to 40 households would have lived. These neighbourhoods lack streets, and the buildings within them were accessed from the roof level. The study explores the social significance of this form of organisation of settlement space at a number of levels. First, the nature of the individual buildings and how these related to household is investigated. Second, non-domestic features in these settlements, such as sub-floor burials, are contextualised in order to identify status.

differentiation between buildings Third the scale and composition of clustered neighbourhoods is studied to arrive at a better understanding of their significance Finally the manner in which neighbourhoods in a settlement related to one another and the ways in which settlements were part of larger settlement systems is considered In this manner new light is shed on the social structure of these Central Anatolian Neolithic communities

The First Ones David Reed Miller, 1992 The field of Indian Native studies in North America has benefited from several streams of development The demands for opening curricula to the voices of Aboriginal Canadians and Native Americans led first to the founding of departments and programs in the 1960s and later to post secondary educational institutions Interdisciplinary approaches from more traditional academic sources forged the useful paradigms of ethnohistory political economy ethnic studies and new literary criticisms with avenues of expression for Indigenous perspectives Much of this later development focused on the nature of sources theoretical approaches to their critique and production and the hermeneutics in interpretation However these are not the only paradigms and others that are deated in Indigenous systems of thought must also be considered and legitimately explored The search for usable theory sources and perspectives has influenced the developing field of Indian Native Studies This collection of readings bring together a series of articles designed to facilitate the teaching of issues important to introductory courses in Indian Native Studies Back cover
