"Eureka... I've found it!"

With California's long history in geology it is no surprise that the Golden State holds a diverse amount of minerals within it's borders. California ranks second in mining (noted resources) from within the United States. In 2000 over 20 commodities - valued at $2.7 billion dollars were produced from 820 mines. These mines cultivate many of the gems that are sold world wide. I have curated a small collection of minerals that have unique textures, symbolism, and colors like the state's gem Benitoite, and the geometrical Trona.
