

Prehistoric clothing

There are no exact certainties as to when the human being started wearing clothes. The anthropologists estimate that it started about 100,000 and 500,000 years ago. The first garments were made of skins and animal leather, herbs and bones, or bones and shells. This is why there are very scarce remains of them which were preserved. Simple needles made of bone are evidence that leather clothes were seen at least 30,000 years ago.

Looking for warming

About 100,000 years ago, the climate in the middle east was too hot to wear clothes to face the very low temperatures of the glaciers. They learned to use leather and also were the pioneers in the use of some kind of clothing. The man of Cro-Magnon, the direct predecessor of modern humans 30,000 years ago, started using bone elements to manufacture some clothes, more elaborated throughout time. He created the needles and sewing garments, with which he covered the entire body. He also was believed to have used the incorporation of the wool and a discover and the fibres with which he weaved the first fabrics.

Garment fabrics

The prehistoric man developed different methods to treat animal hides, a process known as tanning, in order to make them more resistant to different animals and to last longer. The process of tanning was done using animal skins. Preparation of skin got to various processes for its preservation and, also, to decoration.
