response to Africa from W E B Du Bois's The Souls of Black Folk to Alice Walker's The Color Purple. Combining cutting edge theory, extensive historical and archival research, and close readings of individual texts, Gruesser reveals the diversity of the African American response to Countee Cullen's question "What is Africa to Me." John Gruesser uses the concept of Ethiopianism, the biblically inspired belief that black Americans would someday lead Africans and people of the diaspora to a bright future, to provide a framework for his study. Originating in the eighteenth century and inspiring religious and political movements throughout the 1800s, Ethiopianism dominated African American depictions of Africa in the first two decades of the twentieth century, particularly in the writings of Du Bois, Sutton Griggs, and Pauline Hopkins. Beginning with the Harlem Renaissance and continuing through the Italian invasion and occupation of Ethiopia, however, its influence on the portrayal of the continent slowly diminished. Ethiopianism's decline can first be seen in the work of writers closely associated with the New Negro Movement, including Alain Locke and Langston Hughes, and continued in the dramatic work of Shirley Graham, the novels of George Schuyler, and the poetry and prose of Melvin Tolson. The final rejection of Ethiopianism came after the dawning of the Cold War and roughly coincided with the advent of postcolonial Africa in works by authors such as Richard Wright, Lorraine Hansberry, and Alice Walker.

A Mother's Will James Edwards, 2012-06-01. Liberia was founded upon the hopes and dreams of freed slaves seeking opportunities in a new land. However, this dream would become a nightmare for all Liberians as Liberia was plunged into years of civil conflict, poverty, and two civil wars that would claim hundreds of thousands of lives. A Mother's Will is a written documentary about a group of Liberian Christian and Muslim mothers so resolute that their sheer will and determination ended a war. Written for my daughter, it is age appropriate for middle school learners.

Saturday Review of Literature, 1925 The African Sketch-book by Winwood Reade, 1873

British Books, 1913 The Lever of Riches Joel Mokyr, 1992-04-09. In a world of supercomputers, genetic engineering, and fiber optics, technological creativity is ever more the key to economic success. But why are some nations more creative than others, and why do some highly innovative societies, such as ancient China or Britain in the industrial revolution, pass into stagnation? Beginning with a fascinating, concise history of technological progress, Mokyr sets the background for his analysis by tracing the major inventions and innovations that have transformed society since ancient Greece and Rome. What emerges from this survey is often surprising: the classical world, for instance, was largely barren of new technology; the relatively backward society of medieval Europe bristled with inventions; and the period between the Reformation and the Industrial Revolution was one of slow and unspectacular progress in technology, despite the tumultuous developments associated with the Voyages of Discovery and the Scientific Revolution. What were the causes of technological creativity?

Mokyr distinguishes between the relationship of inventors and their physical environment which determined their willingness to challenge nature and the social environment which determined the openness to new ideas. He discusses a long list of such factors showing how they interact to help or hinder a nation's creativity and then illustrates them by a number of detailed comparative studies examining the differences between Europe and China between classical antiquity and medieval Europe and between Britain and the rest of Europe during the industrial revolution. He examines such aspects as the role of the state, the Chinese gave up a millennium wide lead in shipping to the Europeans for example when an Emperor banned large ocean going vessels, the impact of science as well as religion, politics and even nutrition. He questions the importance of such commonly cited factors as the spill over benefits of war, the abundance of natural resources, life expectancy and labor costs. Today an ever greater number of industrial economies are competing in the global market, locked in a struggle that revolves around technological ingenuity. The Lever of Riches with its keen analysis derived from a sweeping survey of creativity throughout history offers telling insights into the question of how Western economies can maintain and developing nations can unlock their creative potential. The African Sketch-book William Winwood Reade, 1873 The Horn Book Guide to Children's and Young Adult Books, 1999
