

Two monologue 1

Woman (to audience) Are they still serving? I mustn't leave this corner for the moment. I'm the 'Other Woman', come where she shouldn't to look at my man. My man and his wife. I've not come incognito either. I've come as my bloody self, drinky; smart, a little crumpled, used to being dressed up at the wrong time in the wrong places. In the only car on a car park after dark. In strange houses in the afternoon. At bus stops in last night's make-up. And I'm not having it no, no more Mister: (She takes out a fag fumbles with it, drops it) I've come here tonight, so he can see us both. Not one in one world and one in another, but both under the same light and choose. (As in a child's choosing rhyme.) Ip, dip, ip, dip, ip, dip. You see, this is the last time I'm going to love. I haven't got it in me to go again. So it's to be him, or it's to be something else, but not another man. No, no more. Where's that fagarette? Did I drop it? Toots to it, toots to the lot of it. Did he look then? (She tugs at her scarf it falls) He did, I'm sure. Oh Jesu! Jesu! I want him. I want to wave and scream. She doesn't know, you know. I can tell, see, see that laugh she makes, too free, too free by far. I think. That's how it is in flick and shadow land, it's all thinking of others and their movements and I am sick to the soul with it. What will he do? What will she say? Will he come? Will he cancel? Is that the door? Was that the car? Dare I shower? Will he ring? Most times these wives, you know, they don't even want them. They won't have love with them, you know. They put them down, you know. But they won't let them loose. My God, they will not let them loosey, And I love loosey. Oh my God, he's coming over. Face him, face him. No shift, shift, shift. Face him. Shift.
