Intercourse in Television and Film Lindsay Coleman, Carol Siegel, 2018-03-12 As many critics and theorists have noted non pornographic films documentaries and quality television series have increasingly included explicit sex scenes since the 1990s some of such scenes featuring the performance of actual sex acts The incidence of sex in narratively powerful resonant visual media can no longer be dismissed as a trend What was once an aesthetic weapon in the arsenal of provocateurs is now frequently integrated seamlessly into the mise en scene and exposition of widely viewed and culturally significant films and television series Intercourse in Television and Film: The Presentation of Explicit Sex Acts analyzes the aesthetic and narrative contexts for the visual media presentation of the sexual act both those which are non simulated and those which are explicit to that point that their simulation is brought into question by the viewer In this book questions involving the performance choices of actors the framing and editing of the sex act and the director s attempts at integrating sexuality into the overall narrative structure as well as their effects are explored

Derrida and the Future of Literature Joseph G. Kronick, 1999-09-30 Presented here is the fullest account to date of Derrida s unconventional understanding of literature and its importance to the development of a poststructural ethics Kronick explains why Derrida has had such a great impact upon literary studies and at the same time he demonstrates how different Derrida's conception of literature is from the literary critic's. Focusing on such key topics as singularity, justice, law, aporia, and the event, this book explores the unexpected ways literature appears in Derrida's works and is tied to his major concepts.

Medieval Monstrosity and the Female Body Sarah Alison Miller, 2010-07-02. The medieval monster is a slippery construct and its referents include a range of religious, racial, and corporeal aberrations. In this study, Miller argues that one incarnation of monstrosity in the Middle Ages, the female body, exists in special relation to medieval teratology insofar as it resists the customary marginalization that defined most other monstrous groups in the Middle Ages. Though medieval maps located the monstrous races on the distant margins of the civilized world, the monstrous female body took the form of mother, sister, wife, and daughter. It was therefore pervasive, proximate, and necessary on social, sexual, and reproductive grounds. Miller considers several significant texts representing authoritative discourses on female monstrosity in the Middle Ages: the Pseudo-Ovidian poem De vetula (The Old Woman), a treatise on human generation erroneously attributed to Albert the Great, De secretis mulierum (On the Secrets of Women), and Julian of Norwich's Showings. Through comparative analysis, Miller grapples with the monster's semantic flexibility while simultaneously working towards a composite image of late medieval female monstrosity whose features are stable enough to define. Whether this body is discursively constructed as an Ovidian body, a medicalized body, or a mystical body, its corporeal boundaries fail to form properly; it is a body out of bounds.

Childhood in America Paula S. Fass, Mary Ann Mason, 2000. Anthology of fiction and nonfiction works presenting society's views of children and childrearing practices in the United States from Colonial times to the present.

The Politics and Aesthetics of Hunger and Disgust Michel Delville, Andrew Norris, 2017-03-27. This study examines how hunger narratives and performances contribute to a reconsideration of neglected or prohibited domains of thinking, which only a full confrontation with the body's heterogeneity and plasticity can reveal. From literary motif or psychosomatic symptom to revolutionary gesture or existential malady, the double crux of hunger and disgust is a powerful force which can define the experience of embodiment. Kafka's fable of the Hunger Artist offers a matrix for the fast, while its surprising last-page revelation introduces disgust as a correlative of abstinence, conscious or otherwise. Grounded in Kristeva's theory of abjection, the figure of the fraught body lurking at the heart of the negative grotesque gathers precision throughout this study, where it is employed in a widening series of contexts: suicide through overeating, starvation as self-performance, or political resistance; the teratological versus the totalitarian; the anorexic harboring of death. In the process, writers and artists as diverse as Herman Melville, Percy Bysshe Shelley, Christina Rossetti, George Orwell, Knut Hamsun, J. M. Coetzee, Cindy Sherman, Pieter Breughel, Marina Abramovic, David Nebreda, Paul McCarthy, and others are brought into the discussion. By looking at the different acts of visceral, affective, and ideological resistance performed by the starving body, this book intensifies the relationship between hunger and disgust studies while offering insight into the modalities of the dark grotesque which inform the aesthetics and politics of hunger. It will be of value to anyone interested in the culture politics.
