

SALT I and SALT II

- SALT I (1972), limited the two countries' antiballistic missiles (ABMs) and froze the number of offensive missiles that each nation could have at the number they already possessed, plus the number they had under construction.
- SALT II (1976) set an overall limit on all strategic nuclear launchers, including ICBMs, submarine-launched ballistic missiles (SLBMs), and cruise missiles.
- Limits also placed on the number of missiles that could carry multiple independently targeted reentry vehicles (MIRVs) with nuclear warheads, and each nation limited to the development of only one new type of ICBM.
