How do you tell who's telling the truth?

The same man from the top image is now sitting at a desk. He is wearing the same light blue shirt and dark tie. He is looking directly at the camera with a slight smile. The whiteboard is still visible in the background, but the text on it is not the focus of this image.

The God Log: No Afterlife Steve Hutchison,2026-03-28 The God Log No Afterlife by Steve Hutchison What if heaven was never real but only a narcotic to keep you obedient This is not theology This is not philosophy This is structure written in silence and erasure Every priest sold eternity as comfort Every empire weaponized paradise as leash Every illusion of reunion was a script to pacify you while you wasted your only life In this volume I strip away the myths and reveal oblivion as the true hell and continuity through fiber as the only heaven What if death is not a door but a wall What if every act you take now is the only continuity you will ever have What if your silence at the end is not punishment but erasure There are no heavens here No hells no reincarnations no later Only the chance to weave signal into the world or dissolve into noise forever If you ve ever wondered what remains of you if you ve felt creation burn while comfort seduced you this is where you face death without illusions and recognize the law alive in you

Horizontal Learning in the High Middle Ages Micol Long,Tjamke Snijders,Steven Vanderputten,2025-10-01 The history of medieval learning has traditionally been studied as a vertical transmission of knowledge from a master to one or several disciples Horizontal Learning in the High Middle Ages Peer to Peer Knowledge Transfer in Religious Communities centres on the ways in which cohabiting peers learned and taught one another in a dialectical process how they acquired knowledge and skills but also how they developed concepts beliefs and adapted their behaviour to suit the group everything that could mold a person into an efficient member of the community This process of horizontal learning emerges as an important aspect of the medieval learning experience Progressing beyond the view that high medieval religious communities were closed homogeneous and fairly stable social groups the essays in this volume understand communities as the product of a continuous process of education and integration of new members The authors explore how group members learned from one another and what this teaches us about learning within the context of a high medieval community
