

Evaluation of Mathematics Programs

EDWARD G. BEGLE
AND
JAMES W. WILSON

Introduction

Evaluation of mathematics programs is considerably more important today than was the case a decade ago. Radical changes in the curriculum at all grade levels, coupled with a variety of new pedagogical techniques, have resulted in a much greater variety of textbooks and textbook sequences than we have ever had before in this country. School officials responsible for decisions on the choice of textbooks and educational procedures are asking for more and better information and for more powerful ways of evaluating alternatives among which they must choose.

This chapter begins with a general discussion of evaluation, including the important problem of stating the objectives of mathematics education in an organized fashion. This discussion is followed by brief reviews of a number of projects which have been concerned in one way or another with the evaluation of mathematics programs. The final portion is a detailed discussion of the variety of evaluation procedures used by the School Mathematics Study Group (SMSG), the largest of the mathematics curriculum projects in this country.

The authors, through their work with the National Longitudinal Study of Mathematical Abilities (NLSMA), a study conducted by SMSG, have been actively engaged in many phases of the evaluation of mathematics programs. A substantial proportion of this chapter draws upon this NLSMA experience.

Kinds of Evaluation

There are many different kinds of activities that have been called "evaluation." There is no quarrel with the "evaluation" of a mathe-

Mathematics Programs A Guide To Evaluation:

Mathematics Programs George W. Bright, A. Edward Uprichard, Janice H. Jetton, 1993-01-27 This volume enables teachers and administrators to design, organize and conduct useful evaluations of their school mathematics programmes without the need to use complicated statistical procedures or research techniques. The authors demonstrate the relevance of an evaluation to any mathematics programme and provide numerous applications of the results. Connecticut K-12 Mathematics Program Evaluation Guide Connecticut Academy for Education in Mathematics, Science & Technology, 1997

The Mathematics Program Improvement Review Ron Pelfrey, 2006 How good is your school's mathematics program? Test scores can provide some general trend information but what you and your students' parents really need are specifics about the quality of the curriculum, the effectiveness of the instruction and the school's overall capacity to support mathematics learning. The Mathematics Program Improvement Review (MPIR) is a proven evaluation process focused on standards for high quality mathematics programs in grades K-12. Based on research into effective program evaluation methods, the MPIR approach uses multiple data sources to clarify exactly what is working within an individual school's math program and what is not. Author and MPIR developer Ron Pelfrey has used this process to evaluate mathematics programs in more than 300 rural, urban and suburban schools and has trained hundreds of educators to conduct reviews. Now this handbook makes the MPIR process and its benefits available to everyone. Inside you'll find guidelines for training review team members and all the materials needed to conduct a review including: Lists of standards and indicators for the 10 essential components of an effective mathematics program; Templates for questionnaires, interviews and classroom observations; Detailed evaluation rubrics; Forms for compiling ratings and generating a final report. Whether used as a basis for informal faculty or departmental discussion to promote best practices in a particular area such as curriculum or instruction, or to guide a formal program evaluation, this book will help any school or district apply MPIR tools and procedures to bring about positive change in students' mathematics learning. Connecticut PreK-12 Mathematics Program Evaluation Guide Connecticut Academy for Education in Mathematics, Science & Technology, 2001

develop and rigorously evaluate the effectiveness of programs for supporting students learning and achievement The Institute of Education Sciences has amplified that purpose Shadish Coryn Noakes Westine Weiss 1997 The requirement that evaluators link research designs to the theories underlying the programs they evaluate is not included in the WWC s standards for rigorous evaluations Given the considerable differences in mathematical goals and theories of learning from which mathematics programs are designed and the high stakes for students mathematics learning and academic futures as well as for the fortunes of program developers it is important to ask whether the WWC s methodological specifications are sufficient or whether program evaluation has once again lost or perhaps never gained sight of the role of theory in evaluation design and implementation Bickman 1987 resulting in overly constrained and uninterpretable syntheses of otherwise methodologically strong evaluation research Schoenfeld 2006 The purpose of this paper is to determine whether calls for theory based evaluation research have had an impact on the extent to which evaluators of mathematics programs attend to program theory in their design implementation and reporting of studies For each report that met stringent methodological standards i e WWC evidence standards the authors asked 1 What type of program theory was articulated none sub theoretical or theoretical Lipsey et al 1985 2 What was the quality of evaluators articulation of program theory entirely implicit drawn from a limited number of resources such as developer or publisher descriptions or drawn from multiple resources and situated in the research literature 3 How was the articulated program theory used in the evaluation and 4 To what extent does attention to program theory vary by characteristics of the program and evaluator s such as the nature of the program s mathematics learning goals and instruction i e back to basics typical inquiry based or blended type of publication e g peer reviewed journal or technical report funding source e g Federal state agency or publisher developer and timing of analysis i e primary or secondary analysis Modeled after the WWC s process every report was examined and coded independently by two individuals employing the same coding scheme and research questions listed here The findings of evaluation studies guide the decisions of policy makers at every level including the adoption of both curriculum materials and intervention programs These decisions are consequential for students mathematics learning and academic futures It is therefore crucial that evaluators get it right when assessing the effectiveness of such programs This analysis indicates that WWC s methodological specifications are inadequate because they overlook understanding and using theory in evaluation design and implementation In general evaluation research of mathematics programs needs to improve in its attention to and use of program theory Tables and figures are appended
