Mike Jess

Losing And Fusing Borderline Transitional Object And Self Relations:

Losing and Fusing Roger A. m.d. Lewin, Clarence G. Schulz, 1992 Drs Lewin and Schulz present a therapeutic approach to the borderline syndromes which they view as disorders of affective instability The borderline patient is in constant struggle with two threats to the integrity of the self For fear of losing the other the borderline patient needs to cling but the clinging brings on the danger of getting too close and fusing with the other thus losing the self The other is both essential and toxic in equal measures a promise and a threat Borderline patients have a difficult time coping with losing and fusing dangers because of constricted relations to their inner experiences Any step forward seems too much like a step back into early developmental chaos Negativism rigidity concreteness and all or none thinking are used to try to provide a modicum of security Using clinical examples drawn from extended and intensive treatments both inpatient and outpatient Drs Lewin and Schulz show the claims of conflicting feelings on borderline patients who are struggling to retain enough sense of inner coherence and stability to go on functioning Holding is crucial to any growth in the borderline self The authors use detailed clinical examples to show how holding helps borderline patients become more capable of managing the losing and fusing dangers Just as borderline patients struggle with the losing and fusing dangers so too must therapists struggle with finding ways to be neither too close nor too aloof Lewin and Schulz describe how the therapists active and involved use of themselves is carried out in the treatment of borderline patients To help the patients make sense of their own affective experiences therapists need to monitor their countertransference which oscillates between too involved and too aloof The authors discuss such topics as borderline emptiness loneliness and chronic suicidality Their clinical examples touch the whole range of borderline symptomatology including cutting burning eating disorders substance abuse and so forth They also take up the dangers and attractions of work with these patients examining such topics as self disclosure therapists dependence and therapists discoveries of access to new parts of their own experience This preeminent and pivotal book transforms current views of what is involved in the treatment of borderline patients , Rethinking Freedom C. Alford, 2005-05-12 This book examines the use and abuse of the term freedom Based on interviews with people concerning the nature of freedom the author compares what the people he talked with said about freedom with what writers and thinkers such as Jean Paul Sartre Herbert Marcuse and Iris Murdoch have to say about freedom He concludes that the political is not the answer and that most of the people interviewed for the book and those like them would be better served by learning the political and social skills necessary to carve out small spaces of freedom in a rationalized world Strong Anticipation: Compensating Delay And Distance Susie Vrobel, 2023-12-06 This book is concerned with the notion of strong anticipation Clearly defined necessary and sufficient conditions are laid out The focus lies on strong anticipation as delay and distance compensation as in temporal recalibration and synchronization of coupled systems Of particular interest are delays which correspond to a boundary shift between a systemic whole and its context Such boundary shifts result from assignment conditions which determine what belongs to the systemic whole and what belongs to its context Delay and distance compensation is described along with long range correlations against the background of a theory of time capable of describing anticipative systems My Theory of Fractal Time describes anticipatory systems in terms of two temporal dimensions succession and simultaneity which are defined and measured in tdepth tlength and tdensity These extensions form an extended present and allow a quantified comparison of obserpant observer participants temporal interfaces Compensated delays are revealed as phenomenal blind spots which result in a new kind of relativity What may be compensated for obserpant A is delayed for obserpant B Compensated delays are ubiquitous and can be found in both cognitive and physical processes Examples are temporal recalibration to restore degraded visuomotor adaptation coupling environment and brain biosemiotics and homeostatic processes dynamical diseases embedded and situated robots control loops with inserted or removed delays cellular automata analog and digital notions of trust transitional objects and potential spaces our perception of time and judgement of duration It is proposed that compensated delays emerge as natural laws

Aggression and Destructiveness Celia HARDING,2006-09-27 Why when and how does aggression go wrong How can we make sense of apparently meaningless destructiveness and violence Aggression is a part of human nature that energises our relationships acts as an impetus for psychic development and enables us to master our world More often we focus on its more destructive aspects such as the violence individuals inflict on themselves or others and overlook the positive functions of aggression In Aggression and Destructiveness Celia Harding brings together contributions from experienced psychoanalysts and psychoanalytic psychotherapists to explore the roots of aggression and the clinical dilemmas it presents in psychotherapy Beginning with accounts of aggression and destructiveness from a range of developmental and theoretical perspectives the book provides useful insights into subjects including Bullying and abusive relationships Male and female violence and destructiveness Depressive perverse and psychotic states of mind Attacks on therapeutic treatment This book makes a valuable contribution to the attempt to make sense of human aggression destructiveness and violence perpetrated against the self others and reality It will be of great interest to trainee and qualified psychodynamic counsellors psychoanalytic psychotherapists and psychoanalysts
