Imagining the Brain: Episodes in the History of Brain Research Chiara Ambrosio, William Maclehole, 2018-12-01 Progress in Brain Research series highlights new advances in the field with this new volume presenting interesting chapters Each chapter is written by an international board of authors Provides the authority and expertise of leading contributors from an international board of authors Presents the latest release in the Progress of Brain Research series Updated release includes the latest information on the Imagining the Brain Episodes in the Visual History of Brain Research Regenerating England, 2016-08-29 In the inter war years there was much debate in Britain as to whether the best path to post World War I regeneration would be found in the promises of science and technology in continued and increased efficiency in specialization and professionalization or whether the future of the nation depended on a rediscovery of older and more authentic ways of doing things on a defiant anti modernism This debate on Britain's future was often conducted in terms of Englishness and the rebirth of a lost more spiritual village England However Englishness also entered inter war social thinking through eclectic assimilations of diverse traditions Prominent themes in the discourses on Britain's post war regeneration include national character citizenship fitness education utopia community and so on The chapters in the present volume address these themes and break new ground by examining debates well known in political and literary history through their relations to science medicine architecture and ideas of social and political health

Engineering Empires B. Marsden, C. Smith, 2004-12-07 Engineers are empire builders Watt Brunel and others worked to build and expand personal and business empires of material technology and in so doing these engineers also became active agents of political and economic empire This book provides a fascinating exploration of the cultural construction of the large scale technologies of empire

Penicillin Robert Bud, 2007 Penicillin is the drug of the twentieth century It was the first of the antibiotics that for decades after the Second World War underpinned a popular belief that infectious disease had at last met its match With the emergence of superbugs in recent decades these hopes have faded Across the world we are warned that widespread antibiotic abuse will inexorably erode the drugs efficacy and our own earlier confidence in them Penicillin pulls these different but conjoined stories into a compelling narrative spanning the second half of the twentieth century Using a wealth of new research Robert Bud sets the discovery and use of penicillin in the broader context of social and cultural change across the world He examines the drug s critical contributions to medicine and agriculture and he investigates the global spread of resistant bacteria as antibiotic use continues to rise Clearly written and highly topical his book will be of great interest to historians scientists and anyone wishing to understand penicillin s seismic impact on modern life

Penicillin Triumph and Tragedy Curated by Robert Bud A new exhibition looking back over 50 years will explore changing attitudes to antibiotics and launch at the Science Museum on Thursday 10 May 2007 In the 1950s antibiotics were cast as wonder drugs but strains of bacteria resistant to penicillin were already widespread They caused many deaths most dramatically infecting hospitalised victims of Asian flu in the autumn of 1957 Now we fear MRSA How have attitudes hopes and fears changed in half a century Press information from Stephen Bromberg Science Museum Press Office stephen.bromberg@sciencemuseum.org.uk 020 7942 4352

Evolutionary Restraints Mark E. Borrello, 2024-05-31 Much of the evolutionary debate since Darwin has focused on the level at which natural selection occurs Most biologists acknowledge multiple levels of selection from the gene to the species The debate about group selection however is the focus of Mark E Borrello s Evolutionary Restraints Tracing the history of biological attempts to determine whether selection leads to the evolution of fitter groups Borrello takes as his focus the British naturalist V C Wynne Edwards who proposed that animals could regulate their own populations and thus avoid overexploitation of their resources By the mid twentieth century Wynne Edwards became an advocate for group selection theory and led a debate that engaged the most significant evolutionary biologists of his time including Ernst Mayr G C Williams and Richard Dawkins This important dialogue bled out into broader conversations about population regulation environmental crises and the evolution of human social behavior By examining a single facet in the long debate about evolution Borrello provides powerful insight into an intellectual quandary that remains relevant and alive to this day

The History of the University of Oxford: pt.2. Nineteenth-century Oxford, 1984 Intellectuals in the Public Sphere in Britain and Norway After World War II Jan Eivind Myhre, 2008 In this volume three Norwegian and three English scholars probe the issue of the role of intellectuals in the two countries following World War II The intellectuals studied comprise many kinds from academics in general particularly sociologists to journalists and politicians amongst others The book investigates the influence of intellectuals on politics and also between the two countries Several tendencies in post war societies have shaped the role of intellectuals secularisation professionalisation internationalisation and the rise of populism to name but a few Although intellectual is a fairly common term in both countries it often tends to fall between two chairs as an analytic concept Therefore it should perhaps rather be viewed as a terminological meeting point where several interesting societal phenomena may be studied BOOK JACKET Current Contents Institute for Scientific Information

founded by Cardinal Wolsey in 1525 and arguably the grandest college in the University of Oxford has been the subject of only one previous history Now Judith Curthoys the college archivist presents a new and fascinating account of this unique institution a joint foundation of college and cathedral with its own peculiar constitution Despite having been described as like cream rich thick and full of clots Christ Church has never been just a refuge for the elite and over the centuries it has produced a dazzling list of famous and learned men and since 1980 women We learn of its traditions and its eccentricities from its early emphasis on prayer and discipline to the intricacies of its early plumbing and from its strong associations with music architecture and art to its battles both ancient and modern with student drunkenness We learn too of the sometimes extraordinary power and influence of the Dean the college's head and at times of the reigning monarch too Charles I even made it his headquarters during the Civil War Above all we see not an ivory tower but a great institution that has survived all the vicissitudes of English history adapting to and often influencing the constant tide of social political academic and ecclesiastical change Oxford Dictionary of National Biography: Tonson-Usher Henry Colin Gray Matthew, Brian

Jonathan Harwood, 2004 In recent decades critics in several countries have complained that education in agriculture engineering and medicine has drifted away from an earlier practical orientation becoming increasingly irrelevant to actual needs Since existing histories have surprisingly little to say about the causes of such academic drift this book develops a model of institutional dynamics which explains why different institutions have evolved closer to the worlds of science or practice The model is based on a study of German agricultural colleges and the study surveys the evolution of the agricultural curriculum during the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries as it swung back and forth between the poles of science and practice It makes a comparative analysis of five colleges in the decades around 1900 some of them more science oriented and others more practical and follows the gradual transformation over half a century of two colleges in Bavaria which had to compete for recognition and funding The wider relevance of these findings is also explored not only for the history of agricultural education in the United States and Britain but also for engineering medicine and management education past and present
