

Fig. 3. Visual examples for the marked images and the extracted watermarks. The first two rows correspond to the HVS-RGB framework and the last two rows correspond to the HVS-YUV framework. Notice that, the input in the first row is identical to that in the third row, and the input in the second row is identical to that in the fourth row.

based on [14] (without secret key), which feeds the image outputted by G directly into the watermark-extraction network to reconstruct either W_1 or W_2 .

Table 2 shows the experimental results, where “mean BER₁” is used for W_1 and “mean BER₂” is used for W_2 . The others are used for the images generated by the marked neural network. It is observed from Table 2 that the BER difference between the proposed strategy and the strategy in [14] is very low, which indicates that the proposed strategy does not impair the watermark fidelity. On the other hand, the proposed two frameworks significantly improve the quality of the image generated by the network. It means that the introduction of HVS is indeed helpful for enhancing the performance of generative model watermarking. Figure 3 further provides some examples, from which we can infer that the images are with satisfactory quality, which verifies the applicability.

3.4 Robustness and Ablation Study

In application scenarios, the marked images generated by the host network may be attacked. It is necessary to evaluate the robustness of the proposed two frameworks against common attacks. To deal with this problem, it is suggested to
