

DISCOURSE ANALYSIS

Discourse analysis is an approach to the study of language that demonstrates how language shapes reality and reveal dominant ways of thinking an acting.

OVERVIEW

Discourse analysis involves the examination of how the 'ways of speaking about things' normalizes and privileges some frames of thinking about things while marginalizing others.

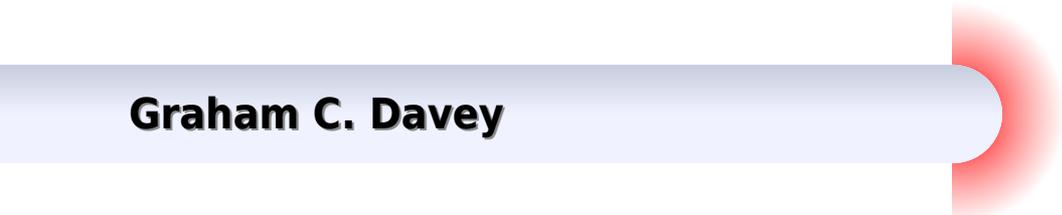

As a simple example, if movies consistently frame the ideal female as passive, silent, and submissive, then this becomes normalized in the "dominant discourse" of gender.

EXAMPLE

Studying Government Policies: A discourse analysis of policy texts would involve looking at the keywords, metaphors, and phrases used in the text and how they reveal ideological frameworks and viewpoints of the government of the day. These sorts of studies often demonstrate how the language of policy texts normalizes some behaviors and marginalizes others.

Making Sense of Discourse. On Discourse Segmentation and the Linguistic Marking of Coherence Relations Jet Hoek, 2018 When people read or listen to a discourse they will try to make sense of it To fully understand a discourse it is essential not only to know the meaning of each individual clause but also to figure out how all clauses are related to each other If all goes well language users end up with an accurate representation of the discourse An important aspect of building a mental representation of a discourse is inferring coherence relations between discourse segments When inferring coherence relations language users have to deduce whether two or more chunks of text constitute for instance a cause consequence relation a rule and an exception alternatives etc Coherence relations can be explicitly marked by a connective e.g. because although or a cue phrase e.g. except for the fact that by comparison but this need not be the case in many instances coherence relations have to be established without the instructions connectives provide or in the case of underspecified connectives with only limited instructions

This dissertation investigates both discourse segmentation and the linguistic marking of coherence relations Using a combination of theoretical exploration parallel corpus studies and experimental methods it provides new insights into how and why coherence relations are explicitly signaled and between which parts of a text people infer coherence relations In addition it contributes toward refining discourse segmentation and annotation guidelines both of which are important
