A key element of democracy is that individuals are given human rights and those human rights are respected by all and protected by the government. It makes sense then that on the first day of class teachers should introduce themselves by saying, "Good morning students, I am [state your name] and I am here to protect your constitutional rights." - Equality means an equal educational opportunity for each student. It means meeting the individual needs of every student in order to give each a chance to succeed in school. The educator who tells a student "If I let you do that, I will have to let everyone else do it," may be claiming that students are equal opportunity to learn, if in fact that student needs special assistance in order to find success in school. Equality does not
