

Six Generations of Civil Rights in Education

Since 1954 Brown vs. Board of Education Supreme Court ruling, great strides have been made in schools. But the fact remains that equity in schools has still not been reached. But for students – who by virtue of their race, ethnic background, sex or national origin are deprived of their civil rights and an equal opportunity to a quality education – equity is a promise they are depending on for their future. Ever since the landmark ruling, our nation has progressed through a series of phases – or generations – of civil rights in education...

The IDRA South-Central Collaborative for Equity (SCOCE) serves Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas (Federal Region 16). Funded by U.S. Department of Education, the center builds bridges among administrators, teachers, parents, students and community members so that all stakeholders can find that common higher ground where all students will benefit regardless of race, sex or national origin.
