Making Place State Projects Globalisation And Local Response To China:

Making Place Stephan Feuchtwang, 2012-09-10 To make a place is to create a location where its creators can feel they belong Processes of place making are still very much ongoing today Geographers sociologists political scientists and philosophers of advanced capitalism have said that place is a localisation of the global However the creation of a place is not legible from such grand perspectives It is also much more creative than can be predicted by translating large scale processes into local cultures Anthropologists have been sensitive to the intimate tragic and lyrical senses of local place But their theorising has been too much bound up with cosmology and insufficiently with the intermediate scales of state and local state In this book Stephan Feuchtwang and his contributors offer a set of historical anthropological and scale mediated studies from China a country that includes a subcontinental variety of cultures and landscapes In the twentieth century it experienced collapse in civil war and was then reasserted as a particularly strong state Now it is managing the fastest growing capitalist economy in the world These intriguing Chinese studies contribute to the anthropology of place and space providing an historical perspective on processes of change and of accommodation to disruption The stories they tell are fascinating in their own right but in addition the result is a critical reformulation of previous theories of place that geographers philosophers historians and anthropologists will find of great interest

Practicing Citizenship in Contemporary China Sophia Woodman, Zhonghua Guo, 2020-04-02 This book examines citizenship as practiced in China today from a variety of angles Citizenship in China and elsewhere in the Global South has often been perceived as either a distorted echo of the real democratic version in Europe and North America or an orientalised other that defines what citizenship is not By contrast this book sees Chinese citizenship as an aspect of a connected modernity that is still unfolding The book focuses on three key tensions a state preference for sedentarism and governing citizens in place vs growing mobility sometimes facilitated by the state a perception that state building and development requires a strong state vs ideas and practices of participatory citizenship and submission of the individual to the collective state community village family etc vs the rising salience of conceptions of self development and self making projects Examining manifestations of these tensions can contribute to thinking about citizenship beyond China including the role of the local in forming citizenship orders how individualization works in the absence of liberal individualism and how social citizenship is increasingly becoming a reward to good citizens rather than a mechanism for achieving citizen equality This book was originally published as a Special Issue of the journal Citizenship Studies

Digital Media in Urban China Wilfred Yang Wang, 2019-10-04 This book examines the use and culture of digital media in Chinese cities By examining examples and data from Chinese and global social media platforms the book argues that digital media facilitate Chinese people's sense of local self and local identity In doing so the book moves on from the polarised debate regarding the democratic function of Chinese internet to instead examine the connection between digital technologies and the country's history culture and eventually people and their everyday lives It offers a rich analysis of a Chinese city in the digital age and challenges the nationalistic approach to study China's digital media culture

Readings in Urban Theory Susan S. Fainstein, Scott Campbell, 2011-03-07 Updated with a majority of new readings the Third Edition of Readings in Urban Theory expands its focus to present the most recent developments in urban and regional theories and policies in a globalized world Around 75% of the readings included are new for the third edition Unifies readings by an orientation toward political economy and normative themes of social justice Expands the focus on international planning including globalization and theories of development Addresses the full range of core urban theory so as to remain the primary text in courses

Beijing from Below Harriet Evans, 2020-05-01 Between the early 1950s and the accelerated demolition and construction of Beijing's old city in preparation for the 2008 Olympics the residents of Dashalar one of the capital city's poorest neighborhoods and only a stone's throw from Tiananmen Square lived in dilapidated conditions without sanitation Few had stable employment Today most of Dashalar's original inhabitants have been relocated displaced by gentrification In Beijing from Below Harriet Evans captures the last gasps of subaltern life in Dashalar Drawing on oral histories that reveal memories and experiences of several neighborhood families she reflects on the relationships between individual family neighborhood and the state poverty and precarity gender politics and ethical living and resistance to and accommodation of party state authority Evans contends that residents' assertion of belonging to their neighborhood signifies not a nostalgic clinging to the past but a rejection of their marginalization and a desire for recognition Foregrounding the experiences of the last of Dashalar's older denizens as key to understanding Beijing's recent history Evans complicates official narratives of China's economic success while raising crucial questions about the place of the subaltern in history

Heritage and Religion in East Asia Shu-Li Wang, Michael Rowlands, Yujie Zhu, 2020-12-29 Heritage and Religion in East Asia examines how religious heritage in a mobile way plays across national boundaries in East Asia and in doing so the book provides new theoretical insights into the articulation of heritage and religion Drawing on primary comparative research carried out in four East Asian countries much of which was undertaken by East Asian scholars the book shows how the inscription of religious items as Heritage has stimulated cross border interactions among religious practitioners and boosted tourism along modern pilgrimage routes Considering how these forces encourage cross border links in heritage practices and religious movements in China Taiwan South Korea and Japan the volume also questions what role heritage plays in a region where Buddhism Taoism and other various folk religious practices are dominant Arguing that it is diversity and vibrancy that makes religious discourse in East Asia unique the contributors explore how this particularity both energizes and is empowered by heritage practices in East Asia Heritage and
