Middle Saxon London:

Lundenwic Robert Cowie, Lyn Blackmore, Anne Davis, Jackie Keily, Kevin Rielly, 2012 This study provides archaeological evidence for the trading port of 7th century London placing it in its regional national and international context Fieldwork results are followed by essays on various aspects of the settlement and finds assemblages and the book also includes a sites gazeteer and a timeline

Citadel of the Saxons Rory Naismith, 2018-11-29 With a past as deep and sinewy as the famous River Thames that twists like an eel around the jutting peninsula of Mudchute and the Isle of Dogs London is one of the world's greatest and most resilient cities Born beside the sludge and the silt of the meandering waterway that has always been its lifeblood it has weathered invasion flood abandonment fire and bombing The modern story of London is well known Much has been written about the later history of this megalopolis which like a seductive dark star has drawn incomers perpetually into its orbit Yet as Rory Naismith reveals in his zesty evocation of the nascent medieval city much less has been said about how close it came to earlier obliteration Following the collapse of Roman civilization in fifth century Britannia darkness fell over the former province Villas crumbled to ruin vital commodities became scarce cities decayed and Londinium the capital was all but abandoned Yet despite its demise as a living city memories of its greatness endured like the moss and bindweed which now ensnared its toppled columns and pilasters By the 600s a new settlement Lundenwic was established on the banks of the River Thames by enterprising traders who braved the North Sea in their precarious small boats The history of the city's phoenix like resurrection as it was transformed from an empty shell into a court of kings and favoured setting for church councils from across the land is still virtually unknown The author here vividly evokes the forgotten Lundenwic and the later fortress on the Thames Lundenburgh of desperate Anglo Saxon defenders who retreated inside their Roman walls to stand fast against menacing Viking incursions Recalling the lost cities which laid the foundations of today's great capital this book tells the stirring story of how dead Londinium was reborn against the odds as a bulwark against the Danes and a pivotal English citadel It recounts how Anglo Saxon London survived to become the most important town in England and a vital stronghold in later campaigns against the Normans in 1066 Revealing the remarkable extent to which London was at the centre of things from the very beginning this volume at last gives the vibrant early medieval city its due

Middle Saxon London Gordon Malcolm, David Bowsher, Robert Cowie, 2003 The Royal Opera House is located on the north side of Covent Garden London in the heart of what was the Middle Saxon settlement of Lundenwic This settlement was a flourishing centre for trade and manufacture from the 7th to 9th centuries Urban redevelopment in 1996 included the largest excavation yet undertaken in the area providing a wealth of information about the settlement its inhabitants their work and daily lives This well illustrated publication reports on the results of the excavations describes a sequence of occupation and considers more general themes such as the relationship of the Middle Saxon settlement to Roman Londinium Saxon crafts and industry the agricultural economy trade and demography The discoveries included an 8th century street plan specialised industrial buildings rubbish and debris from a jewellery workshop evidence of ironworking and most importantly a 9th century defensive ditch with a hoard of Northumbrian stycas buried in its berm The ditch was probably a response to Viking attack but failed to prevent the Viking occupation of Lundenwic in 871 The book also looks at the medieval and post medieval development of the area and numerous brief specialist reports on the finds and environmental remains Lundenwic Robert Cowie,1989

Early and Middle Saxon Rural Settlement in the London Region Robert Cowie,Lyn Blackmore,2008

Until now the evidence for London s Early and Middle Saxon rural settlement and economy has received scant attention This monograph provides a long awaited overview of the subject drawing on the results of six decades of archaeological fieldwork since the war in addition to historical and place name evidence Some of the material has been published before and will be familiar to the reader but much of it has only been available as site archives or unpublished reports and at best briefly summarised as notes in excavation round ups This synthesis therefore forms an indispensable guide to researchers The first part focuses on twenty six sites and six fish traps across the region followed by thematic sections on a range of topics and then a final section on the pottery finds

The Craft of Antler, Bone, Horn and Ivory Working in the Early Medieval Emporia c. AD 600-850 Ian Riddler,Nicola Trzaska-Nartowski,2025-11-13 An in depth exploration of the craft of antler bone horn and ivory working as it evolved within the pre Viking emporia of northern Europe Early Medieval Britain Pam J. Crabtree,2018-06-07

Traces the development of towns in Britain from late Roman times to the end of the Anglo Saxon period using archaeological data The Building of London John Schofield,1999

What did the medieval and Tudor city of London look like How did it grow from its Roman and Saxon origins to a European metropolis This is a detailed account of the evolution of Britain s capital up to the Great Fire of 1666 Although the city was virtually destroyed a few medieval buildings such as the Guildhall remain More evidence survives in legal documents maps and plans and antiquarian drawings There are also new discoveries of urban archaeology in which the author and his colleagues at the Museum of London have played a major part

Tatberht's Lundenwic Jim Leary,Gary Brown,2004

During excavations at the National Portrait Gallery in London a sheep bone was found inscribed with the name Tatberht This man may well have lived in a house at this location sometime during the 8th and 9th centuries This well presented study aims to reconstruct the London or Lundenwic that Tatberht and his contemporaries would have known by focusing on the evidence produced during four major excavations at 28 31 James Street at the Lyceum Theatre in Exeter Street at the National Portrait Gallery Maiden Lane and Exchange Court Jim Leary with contributors presents the evidence from each site in turn looking at the archaeological sequence in each area and the type of finds such as pottery loomweights slag metalwork environmental remains human bone and the occasional coin as well as a group of charred honeybees One technical chapter by Richard Hughes looks in detail at the wattle and daub remains from the National Portrait Gallery This evidence is then discussed in a synthetic discussion in which Jim Leary considers the evolving shape its industry animals and daily life of Tatberht s Middle Saxon London Highly
