

even if he/she is experiencing these challenges in life. To understand the meaning of health more fully, it is important to understand each of its individual components.

Determinants of Health

Determinants are defined as those predisposing factors that influence the health of a particular community. The main factors affecting individual and community health are:

- Intrinsic factors. These are the factors pertaining to the intrinsic nature of the human individual. It may be affected by biological factors, socio-economic disposition, and lifestyle.
- Extrinsic factors. These pertain to what is external to the host, may it be living or non-living and with which he is in constant interaction. Simply put, these pertain to the human environment that may be subdivided in to the physical, biological, and psychological factors.
- Risk factors. These are the attributes or exposure that is significantly associated with the development or acquisition of a certain disease. Health risks may be causative, contributory, or predictive. A person can have one risk factor for a disease, or he/she can have many. The more risk factors a person has, the more likely he/she will get the disease. For example, if people eat healthy, exercise on a regular basis, and control blood pressure, their chances of getting heart disease are less than those of diabetics, smokers, and sedentary people. To lower your risks, take small steps toward engaging in a healthy lifestyle, and you'll see big rewards.

Dimensions of Health

Learning about the six dimensions of health can help a person choose how to make wellness a part of everyday life. Wellness strategies are practical ways to start developing healthy habits that can have a positive impact on physical and mental health.

- Physical - Body size and functioning; recognizing the need for physical activity, healthy foods, and adequate sleep; avoiding unhealthy habits
- Social - Developing a sense of connection, belonging, and sustained support system; having positive relationships
- Intellectual - Recognizing creative abilities and finding ways to expand knowledge and skills; being open-minded
- Emotional - Coping effectively with life and expressing emotions in an appropriate manner
- Spiritual - Having a sense of purpose and meaning in life; establishing peace, harmony, and balance in our lives
- Environmental - Occupying pleasant, healthy, and safe environments that support wellbeing; positively impacting the quality of our surroundings (including protecting and preserving nature)
