

Letters of Evaluation-A Guide for the Author

When writing letters of evaluation for students applying for a graduate program in a health profession or medical school, the following information may be helpful to you. It will assist you in preparing a letter which will be most useful to the admissions committee. The information was obtained from medical school admissions committee members, but it is applicable to all health professions.

Please be sure your letter is signed, dated, and on letterhead - schools may reject it if any of these are missing.

As a reminder, letters of recommendation require a date, letterhead, and a signature.
