

Windows® XP

Windows® XP is an operating system—software your computer needs in order to perform such fundamental tasks as displaying information on the screen and saving data to a disk. To start Windows XP, turn on your computer. When the Windows XP Welcome screen appears, click your user name. If necessary, enter your user name and password.

NOTE: If your computer is connected to a network server, you might see your server logo screen instead.

Desktop

A large area that displays the active programs, the taskbar, and shortcuts to frequently used applications (programs), files, and folders. By default, the Recycle Bin icon is the only icon on the desktop.

Start menu

A two-column menu that provides access to your applications, file-management programs (such as My Computer and Windows Explorer), and computer and network management programs (such as the Control Panel and My Network Places). You can also use the Start menu to get help, search for files, open a command prompt, and shut down your computer. To display the Start menu, click the Start button  or press Windows + Q.

Taskbar

A bar that contains the Start button, the Quick Launch bar, a button for each open application, and the notification area. To switch to an open application, folder, or document, simply click the corresponding taskbar button. To close an item or group on the taskbar, right-click the item or group button and choose Close or Close Group.

Quick Launch bar

Tip: A section of the taskbar that you can use to start applications with a single click. To display this bar, right-click the taskbar and choose Toolbars, Quick Launch. The default icons are Show Desktop, Internet Explorer, and Windows Media® Player.

Notification area (also called the "system tray")

Tip: A section of the taskbar that displays the current time and icons for urgent notifications and programs running in the background. Click the arrow to display any hidden icons.
