

PERCEPTION CHECKING

Perception checking refers to finding out if your perception of someone's behavior is accurate, allowing you to reduce miscommunication issues.

DEFINITION

Perception checking is "the process of testing your perceptions for accuracy" (Floyd, 2011, p. 154).

Generally, it involves checking to ensure you have understood someone correctly.

It is an essential skill in effective communication in both professional and personal contexts because it can help clear-up miscommunication and misunderstandings.

EXAMPLES

- Direct perception checking involves asking the person you're speaking with if your understanding is correct.
- Indirect perception checking involves seeking additional information about what the person is saying or thinking by observing their actions and reactions.
