Micro Architecture:

The Microarchitecture of Pipelined and Superscalar Computers Amos R. Omondi, 2013-03-09 This book is intended to serve as a textbook for a second course in the implementation of microarchitectures of computer architectures. The subject matter covered is the collection of techniques that are used to achieve the highest performance in single processor machines; these techniques center on the exploitation of low-level parallelism, temporal and spatial, in the processing of machine instructions. The target audience consists of students in the final year of an undergraduate program or in the first year of a postgraduate program in computer science, computer engineering, or electrical engineering. Professional computer designers will also find the book useful as an introduction to the topics covered. Typically, the author has used the material presented here as the basis of a full semester undergraduate course or a half semester postgraduate course, with the other half of the latter devoted to multiple processor machines. The background assumed of the reader is a good first course in computer architecture and implementation to the level in, say, Computer Organization and Design by D. Patterson and H. Hennessy, and familiarity with digital logic design. The book consists of eight chapters. The first chapter is an introduction to all of the main ideas that the following chapters cover in detail. The topics covered are the main forms of pipelining used in high performance uniprocessors, a taxonomy of the space of pipelined processors, and performance issues. It is also intended that this chapter should be readable as a brief stand-alone survey.

The volume also features a new section entitled Notes and Sources with pieces highlighting primary sources such as Akbar's Kath sarits gara. Contributors include Ebba Koch, Elizabeth Lambourn, Elias Muhanna, Rina Avner, Kathryn Moore, Alicia Walker, Todd Willmert, Julia Gonnella, Zeynep Ertuğrul, Jere Bacharach, Persis Berlekamp, Heike Franke, Vincenza Garofalo, and Fabrizio Agnello.

Processor Microarchitecture Antonio González, Fernando Latorre, Grigorios Magklis, 2010-12-30 This lecture presents a study of the microarchitecture of contemporary microprocessors. The focus is on implementation aspects, with discussions on their implications in terms of performance, power, and cost of state-of-the-art designs. The lecture starts with an overview of the different types of microprocessors and a review of the microarchitecture of cache memories. Then it describes the implementation of the fetch unit, where special emphasis is made on the required support for branch prediction. The next section is devoted to instruction decode, with special focus on the particular support to decoding x86 instructions. The next chapter presents the allocation stage and pays special attention to the implementation of register renaming. Afterward, the issue stage is studied. Here, the logic to implement out-of-order issue for both memory and non-memory instructions is thoroughly described The following chapter focuses on the instruction execution and describes the different functional units that can be found in contemporary microprocessors as well as the implementation of the bypass network which has an important impact on the performance Finally the lecture concludes with the commit stage where it describes how the architectural state is updated and recovered in case of exceptions or misspeculations This lecture is intended for an advanced course on computer architecture suitable for graduate students or senior undergrads who want to specialize in the area of computer architecture It is also intended for practitioners in the industry in the area of microprocessor design The book assumes that the reader is familiar with the main concepts regarding pipelining out of order execution cache memories and virtual memory Table of Contents Introduction Caches The Instruction Fetch Unit Decode Allocation The Issue Stage Execute The Commit Stage References Author Biographies Carr V.
