

Plutonium - and the case of the 26 young machinists who ingested plutonium dust into their lungs

- The public media has labeled plutonium as “The most dangerous substance on earth.”
- During construction of the atomic bombs used in World War II, 26 young machinists worked on shaping the plutonium bomb, and they breathed plutonium dust from the machining operation.
- After the end of the war, it was realized that Pu has valence 2 characteristics, similar to calcium. Hence, Pu tends to go to the bones. It is also a potent alpha particle emitter, the most damaging of the basic decay products of radioactive isotopes.
