RAND Research Brief: Improving Performance and Efficiency in the Total Army School System , 1999 As part of its ongoing efforts to enhance unit readiness while reducing infrastructure and costs the U S Army has taken steps to consolidate its complex system of schools and training centers and to improve training standards A major objective of this educational reform process is to establish a Total Army School System TASS with fully accredited and integrated schools that provide standard high quality training and education for all components of the Army both active AC and reserve RC Given the magnitude of the changes implied in this restructuring initiative the Army asked RAND's Arroyo Center to assess the performance and efficiency of the existing Army school system including a prototype regional system of RC schools The results of this assessment are presented in TJ%e Total Army School System Recommendations for Future Policy Arroyo researchers conclude that while the Army is moving in the right direction with the new RC prototype even greater improvements can be achieved in the performance and efficiency of the Army school system as a whole

The Total Army School System John D. Winkler, 1999 The United States Army operates an extensive system of schools and centers that provide military education and training to soldiers in the Active Component and the two Reserve Components the U S Army National Guard and the U S Army Reserve This system includes Reserve Component RC training institutions that provide reclassification training for enlisted personnel who change military occupational specialties and leader training for both commissioned and noncommissioned officers As the result of an assessment conducted in the early 1990s the Army and other agencies concluded that the Reserve Component training system was inefficient and difficult to manage and that the quality of training was inconsistent Concurrently defense downsizing and resource reductions were making it necessary to shrink the training infrastructure and reduce training costs Assessing the Performance of the Army Reserve Components School System John D.
