

Narrative form and narrative content¹

Matti Hyvärinen

If narrative is not to become just an artefact or text transmitting information about a culture, then it must be looked at as a strategic performance within specific and multileveled context that order embodiment, situation, and discourse. Family storytelling is an evolving expression of small group culture rather than a collection of stories. (Langellier and Peterson 2004, 39-40.)

If we think about normal, everyday storytelling, we can hardly name too many more recurrent themes than what family life, children, and childhood memories constitute. But families are not only a theme; they also are the primary context where children's storytelling capacities evolve, a context where storytelling conventions are formed, tested and violated. Families as local cultures and imagined communities are also made real and performed by storytelling. "On a daily basis, families 'get a life' by producing and consuming narratives about themselves. Put another way, a person gets a family (life) by daily performances of telling and listening to its stories", say Kristin Langellier and Eric Peterson (2004, 112). There could be, therefore, a good deal to do in the narrative study of families and childhood.

As regards the general magnitude of the topic, the work by the philosopher Daniel D. Hutto (2007, 2008) deserves to be mentioned. Hutto discusses the theory of folk psychology (according to which we routinely assume that other people have minds, desires, beliefs and reasons), and criticizes prevailing theories in cognitive science. Hutto argues against the dominant theory that we have an innate "theory of mind", and ¹ In spite of the singular forms used in the title, I do not share the old structuralist idea of a singular form of narrative. Hayden White's (1987) title The Content of the Form obviously refers to an assumed mandatory form of narrative. This is even more clear in the work of another philosopher of history, Louis Mink, who maintains that "while the structure of stories bodies forth a particular conceptual scheme necessary to any understanding of the story, there are also at a more general level conceptual presuppositions of the very idea of narrative form itself, and these supervene on its many varieties (Mink 1988, 186, italics MHH). By the "very idea of narrative form itself", Mink refers to the Aristotelian model. White, as well, originally subscribed to this understanding of the narrative form (White 1987, 24). The 'forms', in my use, refers to the 'how' of narrative expression, interaction and performance, and is understood to be irrefutably plural, and never a 'narrative form itself'.

Narrative Complexity in Christopher Nolan's "Memento". Narrative Structure, Unreliability, Fabula Construction and Cinematography as Key Elements for the Spectator's Manipulation Claudia Rumms, 2015-10-16 Seminar paper from the year 2015 in the subject Film Science grade 1 3 University of Münster language English abstract In my term paper I will examine the narrative structure in Memento which switches between chronological narration and reversed temporality With respect to this unique narrative structure I will take a closer look at the black and white and colour sequences the opening sequence and the outstanding and resolvent scene 22 A especially regarding the cinematography used In the further course of my work you will learn of the essential role of the unreliable narrator regarding my thesis and finally what impact the fabula construction in Memento has on his viewers Causes and their effects are basic to narrative but they take place in time This quotation from Bordwell's and Thompson's work Film Art an Introduction does not only show a fundamental principle of narration but furthermore depicts a possibility to manipulate the spectator's understanding of a story Christopher Nolan's Memento is one example of what a complex narration can be The film shows two separate stories of Leonard an ex insurance investigator who suffers anterograde amnesia and attempts to find the murderer of his wife which is the last thing he can remember On the one hand there is a forward moving storyline the black and white scenes while the other one the colour sequences tells the story backwards Although the story behind the film is rather simple the narrative structure is extremely complex and clever which demands constant attention from its spectators This term paper will deal with the methods used in Memento which mislead the audience's understanding of the story My thesis is therefore Narrative complexity in Christopher Nolan's Memento Narrative structure Narrator's unreliability fabula construction and cinematography as key elements for the spectator's manipulation Apart from the film Memento the central literature I will work with is the essay by Stefano Ghislotti Narrative Comprehension Made Difficult Film Form and Mnemonic Devices in Memento the documentary Anatomy of a Scene about the making of Memento a text by Andy Klein named Everything You Wanted to Know about Memento and different filmic narrativity by Jakob Lothe David Herman and Edward Branigan In addition to that there is a self-generated sequence analysis attached to the term paper in order to have an overall view of the scenes I take a closer look at The Discipline of History and the History of Thought M.C. Lemon, 2002-06-01 Although much has been written of the nature of history and its disciplinary problems less attention has been paid to the history of thought M.C. Lemon's rigorously philosophical work first re asserts the discipline of history in general as narrative based before pursuing the methodological implications for the history of thought This original work of scholarship will raise the level of argument in philosophy of history and provoke
