Kant's Legacy Predrag Cicovacki,2001 The late Lewis White Beck Professor of Philosophy at the University of Rochester for many years was one of the world s leading Kant scholars Beck considered the most significant element of Kant s rich complex and controversial legacy to be the ultimate philosophical question What is Man Kant s answer that humans are creators is ambiguous On the one hand it dignifies humans by elevating them above blind mechanical forces of nature But it also imposes difficult burdens including the task of providing a unitary worldview and an immanently grounded system of values and norms The contributors to this volume under Beck s influence concur that this theme is of central importance for the proper understanding and evaluation of Kant s legacy The papers address issues concerning creativity in all aspects of human experience from knowledge of the external world to self knowledge from moral to religious dilemmas from judgments of taste to the art of living with a constant awareness of the limitations as well as the possibilities of such creativity Predrag Cicovacki is Associate Professor of Philosophy College of the Holy Cross Transmission Alignment Decision Making Bruce

H. Murray,1972 Parenting Skills Workshop Series John Bailey,Susan Perkins,Sandra Wilkins,1995 Only Words Catharine A. MacKinnon,1996-03-01 MacKinnon contends that pornography racial and sexual harassment and racial hate speech are acts of intimidation subordination terrorism and discrimination and should be legally treated as such In the Spirit of the Earth Calvin Martin,1992 This meditation by an award winning historian calls for a new way of looking at the natural world and our place in it while boldly challenging the assumptions that underlie the way we teach and think about both history and time Calvin Luther Martin s In the Spirit of the Earth is a provocative account of how the hunter gatherer image of nature was lost with devastating consequences for the environment and the human spirit According to Martin our current ideas about nature emerged during neolithic times as humans began to domesticate animals and farm the land In the hunter gatherer mind animals and plants were spiritual beings and the earth a reliable provider But in neolithic innovations Martin finds the roots of our own curiously alienated relationship with other living things and with the earth itself

This alienation is revealed not only in our artifice the technology that moves us further and further away from nature but even in the way we speak about the world It is revealed most dramatically perhaps in the horrific destruction we have visited on animals and landscapes Martin sees the shift to agricultural economies as a change in spiritual imagination This new approach to food getting meant a new understanding of ourselves and the world a new powerful image of the self relative to plants and animals It led to food surpluses a population boom the appearance of cities and ceremonial centers and the emergence of priestly classes and ruling elites in short to all the achievements follies and horrors of civilization Martin argues that history his own discipline and human centered historical consciousness lie at the heart of this ultimately destructive ideology Notions of order and progress of a chosen people and linear time fuel our sense that the world is ours to improve exploit and even destroy We need to rediscover the wisdom and sanity of less presumptuous ideas of nature a process that demands a much larger narrative than historians have been writing and telling Without calling for a return to hunting and gathering Martin asks if some of what we lost or left behind in the distant past might be reclaimed and used again To make peace with the earth To make peace with ourselves Many will respond with that oft heard reply But we cannot go back To which I respond But we never left never left our true real context that is Homo is still here on this planet earth abiding in our most fundamental and necessary nature by its fundamental and necessary terms We left all of that only really in our fevered imagination It all began as an act of imagination an illusory image most fundamentally an image of fear and so the corrective process must likewise begin with an image Let us re learn as hunter gatherers knew to the core of their being that this place and its processes even in our death always takes care of us that Homo s citizenship and errand rest not with any creed or state but with that star s substance from which he had arisen from In the Spirit of the Earth WPA, Writing Program
